
Outline of procedure.

In order to ascertain and record the views of all interested bodies, this committee arranged a series of public hearings in various groups that discussions of particular taxation problems would take place.

At such meetings the fullest discussions were had and recorded in complete detail. These records form a part of the committee's working library.

In addition to oral presentations of their particular cases, many groups took advantage of the committee's invitation and presented written briefs. Many of these briefs were prepared by taxation experts of national reputation and have materially lessened the labors of this committee in ascertaining the viewpoint of the various taxpayers.

Shortly after the conclusion of these public hearings, the committee selected a technical staff which commenced work in June, 1930.

The committee realized that the time had passed when any single state, unaided by the experience of others, can hope to develop a modern, practical and just system of taxation. Accordingly, the committee's technical staff entered into correspondence with tax commissions throughout the country, various departments of the State and federal government and with all California assessors, exchanging views of mutual interest, receiving printed taxation reports and statistical data. Thus, a practical and modern working library of taxation literature has been acquired. The committee will have occasion to quote from these sources to substantiate certain findings as this report proceeds.

Considerable time was devoted to an intensive study of the 1927 commission's report and the various tables and statistical material contained therein. It is quite clear that the 1929 report condensed the present system of taxation in California in no uncertain terms. That Commission indicted the present system as antiquated and charged to the present method of raising revenue to the fault that it has no balanced relation to the fiscal needs of the State. The Commission gave up as useless any effort to establish a true equalization between common and utility property and, in short, recommended a complete change in the present system of State taxation.

This committee adds its corroboration to the 1927 Commission's charges of inequality in the tax burden and the inelasticity of the present tax system. The committee is of the opinion, however, that these faults may, in a great measure, be corrected without resort to a basic change in the State's general tax structure. Progress can and should be made in taxation methods, but changes should be brought about with reasonable certainty that they are practical and will result in adequate revenue to the State and its political subdivisions.

For example, the recommendation of the Martin Commission that the State abandon the gross receipts tax upon utilities contemplates an immediate and basic change in our existing State tax system. This committee believes that it would be practically impossible to put this major recommendation into execution without grave fiscal disturbance to various political subdivisions of the State as well as to private business.

This committee has been impressed with the thought that one outstanding difficulty connected with the taxation situation is the fact that the State has made no provision whereby adequate aid may be extended to local assessors in matters pertaining to research and administration.

Every assessor in the State in response to various questions sent out by this committee have called special attention to this particular need. This committee is further supported in this opinion by the members of the State Board of Equalization; by the records of the special commissions of inquiry in our own and other countries; by reports of the National Tax Conference, by the latest writings of such recognized tax authorities as Professor Edwin R. A. Seligman of Columbia University, Dr. H. L. Lutz of Princeton University, and others of equally high standing.

The tax reform program which this committee will suggest comprehends among other things specific recommendation calling for closer cooperation between local and State taxation authorities.

The ten recommendations of the Martin Commission will now be considered in detail.

COMMENTS ON THE MARTIN TAX COMMISSION'S RECOMMENDATIONS
ONE, TWO, THREE AND FOUR.

For convenient reference the first four recommendations of the Martin report are listed together, relating, as they do, to the suggested abandonment of that part of the system generally spoken of as "separation of sources."

The Martin Commission recommended:

First. That the operative real estate of all public utilities be valued by the State and then returned to the counties to be added to the local tax rolls and subjected to the same tax rates as are imposed upon the real estate of corporations and individuals.

Second. That a franchise tax be imposed by the State on all public utilities measured by their net income in the same manner and at the same rate as the similar tax on banks and other corporations.

Third. That the State levy a direct tax on property in general, including the real estate of public utilities, to make good any deficiencies in revenue which may arise after the adjustments herein recommended are made.

Fourth. That the personal property taxes of corporations now paid to the localities and then offset against the new franchise tax be abolished (suitable compensation being made to the localities for the loss of revenue involved) and that the rate of this franchise tax, applying to all corporations, banks and public utilities, be then increased from 4 per cent to 5 per cent, in case the experience during the next three years indicates that such an increase is desirable.

Recommendation of 1927 Commission on separation of sources.

Such recommendations collectively form the basis of the new proposed State system designed to supplant the present tax for State purposes upon the public utility corporations. In brief, it is proposed to value the operative real estate of all public utilities by the State and apportion such value between the counties and localities to be taxed locally as other real estate is there taxed; to also impose a franchise tax on such utilities for State purposes at the same rate and in the same manner as is imposed on banks and other corporations, and then also have the State levy a direct tax on all property, including the real estate of public utilities for any deficiencies that may be found to exist in State revenues. Under the tenth recommendation of the Martin Commission, it urged that the valuations be made by an appointive State Tax Commission.

Fiscal aspects of present system.

The present tax system, in so far as the raising of revenue for State purposes is concerned, has proved simple and inexpensive in administration; it has produced adequate funds for ordinary State needs; it has made available a surplus of approximately $30,000,000. From the revenue producing standpoint it can not be declared unsatisfactory. The criticism that inequalities have developed between various classes of utilities and between various companies within the same class of utilities, might possibly be directed with equal force against any tax system. These inequalities can be eliminated or at least reduced to a practical minimum by allowing the Legislature greater powers of classification and reclassification. Furthermore, the criticism of inequalities between groups is more properly available to the companies that are affected by the present tax method, that is, the taxpayers themselves. In no instance has any group or company that has made its views known to this committee requested or urged the abandonment of the present system and, in each instance, where asked, has expressed opposition to the plan proposed by the Martin Commission. While this fact should by no means be controlling, it is at least significant that the taxpayers affected are not asking for a new system by reason of existing inequalities of tax burden among themselves. The present system has been definitely established from a legal standpoint; its revenues are ascertainable with reasonable certainty and the State's financial policy can be pursued with assurance of adequate funds.

Tax on utilities as a property tax.

The more serious complaint against the present system of State taxation has been directed toward the alleged discrepancy or inequality between the tax burden on common property for purposes of local taxation and that borne by public utility property for State purposes. In administrative and legislative theory and practice, the legal justification for the present utility tax, as determined by the courts, has been based on the premise that it is a property tax and that a dollar value of public utility property should bear and pay the same proportion of taxes that a dollar value of common property pays. The provision in our constitution for the levy of an ad valorem tax on all property,¹ including property of the public utilities, in the event of a deficiency in the gross receipts revenues for State purposes, further emphasizes the underlying principle that the gross receipts tax is essentially a property tax and that as such the utilities should bear an equal tax burden with common property. Attempts at equalization of tax burdens of these two general classes of property have been made from time to time. For instance, in 1920, the rate paid by common property, as found by the State Board of Equalization, was $1.45 per $100 of value. Tax rates on the gross receipt of utilities were increased in the year 1921 for the purpose, it was claimed, of equalizing the burden between utility and common property. In 1929, the State Board of Equalization found that the average burden on common property was about 1.80 per cent.¹ The 1927 Commission found it to be not definitely determinable, but somewhere between 1.52 and 1.73 per cent.² The rate of tax burden borne by the utilities differed from that borne by common property, in some instances being higher and in others lower. It is admitted by all that the tax burden should, as far as is possible to secure it, be equal between the two classes; but no attempt at a general equalization of burden on all utilities has been undertaken since 1921.

This problem must of necessity be considered from a state-wide viewpoint. A comparison of the tax burden on the operative property of utilities and on common property can only be based upon averages of the tax burden on property within each class. This study is usually made according to counties. From such averages, it appears that there are admittedly instances where the present system of separation of sources seems to operate to the disadvantage of the particular county with respect to the tax burden on common property in such county. Increase of State aid to general State functions such as schools may to some extent compensate such counties for the inequalities arousing complaint. A full consideration of the many factors necessarily incident to a complete change in the system of State taxation, as proposed by the 1927 Commission, and the possible resulting effect upon State revenues and the burden on local or common property forces the conclusion that the effect upon the State as a whole, rather than upon the certain counties, must be the controlling factor.

One of the declared primary purposes of the Commission's recommendations was to remove real estate from its present exposed position and not to place the increasing burden of government upon the owner of real estate, nor to increase the tax burden of the farmer and the small home owner.

No assurance can be given that the adoption of the 1927 Commission's recommendations would not, in all probability, produce the very result that all desire to avoid; and, which result, if known beforehand, would certainly cause its rejection. In other words, its operation might result in a lesser tax from public utilities as such, and a greater burden upon common property as such.

Difficulties of valuation.

The method of State assessment of operative utility real estate would require the valuation for assessment purposes of all real estate and improvements in the several counties, municipalities and districts where the same may be situated. It would not include the personal property of such public utilities. In fact, under recommendation fourth the personal property taxes of such corporations would be entirely abolished. Then, it is proposed, a franchise tax would be imposed in the same manner and at the same rate as is imposed upon banks and other corporations. In other words, what may be called the "unit" value or the total value of a utility (which combines with the value of all its tangible and intangible assets, its going concern value, to arrive at its actual value for State equalizing purposes) would be separated into the different elements or factors which constitute its actual value. The result to the counties might well be that the elimination of the personal property tax from utility corporations and the low yield from the franchise tax (especially if the real estate offset is to be allowed and continued, as now in effect in the Bank and Corporation Franchise Act, and the elements of deduction and depreciation are to be contended with) will cause the ultimate tax burden that the owner of common property would have to pay to local as well as to State government to exceed that which he is now paying to the support of local government alone. This is particularly true as the recommendations of the Martin Tax Commission while proposing that the personal property of all corporations should be exempt from both State and local taxation seem to imply that the individual besides State and local taxes on real estate would also pay taxes upon his personal property to both the State and local governments.

Probable increase in tax burdens.

The State has not found the most satisfactory method of taxing national banks. It is hoped that Congress will liberalize its present stringent provisions of such taxation. While the State may continue under the present system to tax national banks and corporations upon the basis of income, it seems inadvisable to place public utilities in the same class. With the real estate tax offset in the system and no previous experience to guide the Legislature, it might result in little or no revenue from this source for several years. In other words, the addition of the operative real property of utilities to the county tax rolls, under the plan proposed, carries no assurance that the tax burdens on common property in the counties will be lessened. It seems practically certain that the tax contribution from the public utilities would, by reason of the factors involved, such as elimination of personal property tax of utilities and low yield of franchise tax, be less than that now made by them. The burden would thus be transferred, in so far as deficiencies in revenue are concerned, to already overburdened real estate.

Should the farmer and home owner find his taxes increased by reason of the exemption of the personal property of the public utilities, and the failure or inability of the Legislature to impose an adequate revenue producing franchise tax on such utilities, as a result of the proposed change, they might well state that such a contingency should have been called to their attention before they voted upon the matter. This committee can not at this time give any reasonable assurance that if the plan of the Martin Commission was adopted such an increase in the tax burden on common property will not occur.

Recommendation of committee on separation of sources.

The effect of the adoption of 1927 commission's plan is so uncertain, particularly with respect to the tax burden now borne by real estate, and particularly the farmer and home owner, that this committee is unwilling to recommend the submission to the Legislature of any proposed constitutional amendment designed to make the same effective.

This committee accordingly recommends a retention at this time of our present gross receipts tax system in preference to the adoption of the Martin Commission plan. When Congress shall have amended section 5219 of the revised statutes so as to permit the several states to tax national banks in any manner that they may see fit as long as the burden on such banks does not exceed that borne by State banks and other corporations (so that the necessity of continuing the real estate tax offset will no longer exist) and the factor of depreciation is more definitely determinable, the Legislature may be in a better position to judge and pass upon the feasibility of the suggested plan. But with the grave uncertainties on the one hand as to the effect and operation of the proposed plan, particularly as to those classes upon whom it is least desired to place added taxes, placed, on the other hand, against the known operation of our present system, the committee is constrained to recommend the retention of the existing method rather than to change to one, the effects of which are uncertain.

Adjustments in tax rates of utilities.

The retention of our present system, however, involves the further consideration of whether the tax burden upon public utility property and upon common property has reached its limit or can such classes of properties carry added tax burdens as costs of government increase. It is generally conceded that real estate as taxed locally is not only carrying its full share but is in fact overburdened by taxes. It has not been determined, at least to the same degree, that all classes of public utility property have reached their full limit of taxation. In fact, the retiring Governor recommended in his last biennial message that the rate upon light and power and upon telephone companies be increased. Many contend that in the case of regulated monopolies the gross receipts tax is simply a sales tax upon service rendered and that the tax is shifted to the ultimate consumer and for this reason the tax rates on utilities should be kept as low as possible. This may be partly true. It must be recognized, however, that when competition enters, the entire tax burden imposed upon the utilities through the gross receipts measure is not thus transferred to the consumer, and the argument that the tax is shifted to the consumer is not a complete answer to a proposed equalization.

If it is determined, therefore, that in fact there is an unequal distribution of the tax burden of certain public utilities and that borne by common property, then the means of securing greater equality in tax burden as between these two classes of property is present by the method of adjusting the rates on utilities to conform to the average tax burden upon common property.

If the equalization of the tax rates on public utilities to the level of the tax on common property necessitates an increase that will produce more revenue than the State actually needs, then increased contributions by the State toward costs of local government should have tendency to reduce the tax burden of the counties to that extent. Such a reduction would result, of course, if the equivalent amount of money thus saved to the counties would not be in fact collected and spent for other purposes. In other words, it would be incumbent upon local taxpayers to see that the local tax rate would be reduced in proportion to the amount of the State's added contribution to activities formerly supported to a greater degree by the counties, rather than to allow the tax levy to remain the same and the money, intended to be saved, nevertheless collected and spent for new purposes.

Accordingly, when the time arrives (if it has not already) when utility property and common property are paying their full share of the cost of government, then new and additional sources of revenue must be found, if deficiencies exist, or if a general lowering of the tax burden on each class is to be attained.

Consideration of personal income tax and other proposed new sources of revenue.

Numerous methods and proposed schemes for tax limitation, gradual reduction of present tax burdens and new sources of revenue have been suggested.

Some suggest, as did the 1927 commission in its sixth recommendation, the personal income tax; others, the sales tax; others, a limited sales or luxury tax; still others, a severance tax; and some, the diversion of revenues now collected for special purposes into the general fund.

Effect upon tax rates of utilities.

The legal effect of any material change in the relative tax burden borne by common property as against that borne by the utilities, by the introduction of new taxes has not been determined. Should the State, for example, continue to tax utilities under the present method and divert all new sources of revenue to the localities? Again, it has not been determined whether the revenues from the proposed new sources could legally, under the State and federal constitution, be applied only to reduction of local taxes, or whether there must be maintained the general equality of tax burden between public utility and common property, thus necessitating a decrease in the tax rates upon public utilities in the proportion that the tax rates on common property had been lowered by receiving revenue from other sources.

If the rates upon utilities were decreased for this reason, it would necessarily mean that the State would have to receive some portion of the revenue derived from the new sources to make up for the loss it would sustain by a reduction in the tax rates on utilities.

Effect upon local taxpayers.

Nor has the committee had the means, time, nor opportunity to consider intensively the effect of the income tax, or sales tax or other forms of taxation upon our system. The experience of other states furnishes slight assistance. Those states that have the income tax now in effect are seriously studying and have commissions at work on the problems; whether such tax is in fact a substitute tax, resulting in a lessening of the tax burden upon real estate, or is simply an additional tax giving greater opportunity for increased expenditures with no benefit to real estate; whether new taxpayers are reached by the introduction of a personal income tax or taxpayers already paying heavy taxes upon their real property furnish the bulk of the income tax; whether or not a sales tax is to be urged as an added source of revenue to the income and property tax; whether or not the sales tax is one that is passed on to the consumer and to the one who is least able to bear it rather than the one who is best able to pay; as to what articles should be selected for the imposition of the so-called luxury sales tax.

The same situation prevails generally throughout the country and is receiving much attention by the officers of the National Association of Real Estate Boards. A research committee has been appointed, of which Professor Simeon E. Leland of the University of Chicago is in charge, with several assistants from different universities. He has been authorized by the national association to make a detailed study and report. The national association in this movement has secured the cooperation of the United States Building and Loan League, the National Association of Building Owners and Managers, and the Mortgage Bankers Association of America. The four points to be studied and reported on are as follows:

1. Are state income taxes a method of relieving real estate of some of its tax burdens?
2. Can sales taxes be used as a method of relieving real estate?
3. Are constitutional and statutory limitations on taxes and public indebtedness effective?
4. What miscellaneous city revenues can be developed to make the real estate levy more equitable?

The New York state tax survey commission is delegated to report to the 1931 New York legislature on the following subjects:

1. Whether real property can be relieved from any of the tax burden it now bears.
2. Whether the imposition of a sales tax is desirable.
3. Whether the laws relating to the taxation of personal income should be revised.
4. Whether taxation of industries under the existing system is detrimental to industrial development of the State.
5. Whether tax burdens may be distributed more equitably among the tax paying abilities and taxable objects.
6. Whether the laws relating to tax exemption should be revised.
7. Whether federal and State revenue systems can not be better coordinated.
8. Whether the methods of apportioning revenues collected by the State to the localities are best suited to existing conditions.

This demonstrates that California is not alone in its consideration of this problem. There is as yet no definite answer. Accordingly, the research bureau hereinafter recommended, if adequately provided for, may, in the course of its investigations and by the time the 1933 session of the Legislature convenes, furnish information and suggestions that will enable California to adopt a definite course based upon an accurate forecast which is not now available.

Other recommendations of 1927 commission.

The recommendations of the 1927 commission not specifically dealt with above may be briefly considered as follows:

Tax rates on gross premiums of insurance companies.

The fifth recommendation suggested a revision of the rates and elimination of the reinsurance deductions which the courts have in effect read into the constitution. A constitutional amendment would be required to include the reinsurance deductions in the tax base and also to abolish the deduction from the tax assessed for real estate taxes paid. Because of lack of proper information, this committee does not feel warranted in making any recommendations in the suggested revision in rates. This also applies to the present tax rates on short line railroads, light and power and gas companies, telephone companies, Pullman and refrigerator car companies. Such matters may properly be considered by the standing committees of the two houses of the Legislature when reports based upon the investigations of other State agencies are made available. The State Board of Equalization and certain departments of the University of California, have, during the past two years, investigated certain phases of this general subject matter and their reports thereon will undoubtedly be of material assistance.

Motor vehicles.

The seventh recommendation of the Martin Commission proposed that the present local personal property tax on motor vehicles be abolished and that the present State license tax of $3 be increased sufficiently to reimburse the counties for loss of revenue involved. Substantially, such a proposal was submitted to the people at the last general election, known as Amendment No. 18.¹ It was defeated. It does seem, however, that proper legislation can and should be enacted which would effectively place such property upon the county tax roll and thus secure to the counties, at little expense, substantial revenues that now entirely escape legislation. Some form of cooperation between the local assessors and the State Motor Vehicle Department, it would seem, could readily accomplish this objective. The assessors of the State claim that over 400,000 automobiles escape taxation each year, with a consequent loss of local revenue of over $3,000,000 annually.

Equalization of taxes on motor carriers.

The eighth recommendation of the 1927 commission suggests granting sufficient authority to the Legislature to equalize the taxation of motor carriers. It is apparent that motor carriers that are common carriers are paying a greater tax burden than those that are not, and it is suggested that further equalization of this burden be given consideration by the Research Bureau recommended herein. At the same time it is recommended that the revenues collected by the State under the gross receipts tax from common carriers be placed in the general fund for the general support of State government, the same as the revenues from other utilities. The gas tax paid indirectly by such carriers may well be considered the contribution of such utilities to the highway fund.

Inheritance taxes.

The ninth recommendation of the Martin Commission, relating to inheritance taxes, was adopted by the 1929 Legislature, and requires no further comment.²

State Board of Equalization.

The tenth recommendation of the Martin Commission suggests that the State Board of Equalization be abolished and that an appointive tax commission be appointed to administer the State taxes and value the real estate of the public utilities to be returned to the localities. Inasmuch as the committee does not recommend the basic change involved in the first four recommendations of the 1927 commission, and the adoption of such four are made dependent upon the adoption of the tenth recommendation, further comment seems unnecessary.

RECOMMENDATIONS OF JOINT LEGISLATIVE COMMITTEE ON TAXATION ON 1927 COMMISSION'S PLAN.

From the foregoing, the committee submits the following recommendations with reference to the recommendations set forth in the 1927 commission's report, and also recommendations with reference to the present system of taxation.

RECOMMENDATION I.

(a) That for the present the existing system of State taxation involving "separation of sources" be retained.

(b) That the Legislature be empowered to make such further classification and subclassification of utility groups taxable upon their gross receipts for State purposes as may be necessary in order to achieve a more equitable distribution of the tax burden.

(c) That the State Board of Equalization extend its studies with respect to the average tax burden on common property and the tax burden on utilities in order that more accurate comparisons between the tax burden on common property and the property of utility groups may be ascertained.

RECOMMENDATION II.

(a) That a research department, consisting of technical experts in the fields of economics, valuation procedure and taxation, be created within the State Board of Equalization to operate under the coordinate control of the Governor, the Director of Finance and the State Board of Equalization, the function of which shall be to gather facts concerning all matters appertaining to revenue and taxation, and submit such facts and recommendations thereon to the Legislature.

(b) That the name of the State Board of Equalization be changed to that of the State Tax and Equalization Board.

Assistance to local assessors.

It seems advisable to have some agency of the State government permanently authorized and charged with the duties of collecting tax facts and data. A beginning of such an agency is recommended herein. Whether it shall ultimately be a new constitutional body enjoying a broad grant of powers which shall be appointive or elective may depend somewhat upon the system of taxation in effect.

Under the present system, the State Board of Equalization is almost wholly administrative. All policies are determined by the Legislature. The board collects facts as directed by the Legislature and administers the computation of taxes due from insurance companies, public utilities and motor vehicle fuel producers—our largest sources of revenue. No complaint has been made of its administration of such laws and no need has been shown for its abolition.

Certain details of administration of the local tax laws, particularly as to the matter of uniform and improved methods of local assessment and valuation, have suggested themselves to the committee. Great variation exists among the several counties of the State as to rate of assessment of real property to actual value; thus, in San Bernardino County, the 1927 commission, from data of the State Board of Equalization, found the ratio to be 26.3 per cent of actual value, San Diego 27.2 per cent; Humboldt 47.7 per cent; San Francisco 44.7 per cent; Sacramento 46.7 per cent; Placer 51.5 per cent, and Imperial 49.7 per cent. The attitude of the assessors themselves is expressed in a resolution adopted at their annual association at Los Angeles, September 24 to 27, 1930, as follows:

RESOLUTION.

"WHEREAS, The County Assessors' Association of California, recognizing the steadily increasing demand that exists for the revision of State laws relating to local taxation and assessment procedure, expresses the belief and conviction, that, before such revision can be intelligently undertaken, it is essential that facts concerning the present conditions insofar as local taxation and assessment procedure are concerned, be secured and

WHEREAS, The county assessors of the State of California are firmly of the opinion that any tax legislation based solely upon theory is a dangerous expedient, now, therefore, be it

Resolved, That the County Assessors' Association of California, in annual convention assembled, records itself as recommending the creation of an agency of the State government, to consist of men experienced in the practical administration of laws relating to local taxation and assessment procedure, and in the practical handling of the problems that administration of such laws impose—said agency under the direction of the elected officials, to be vested with the duty of assembling and compiling as directed, the basic facts which relate to local taxation laws and local assessment procedure, the said agency acting under such direction to devote its entire time to the study of local taxation and assessment problems, with the definite restriction of its powers to such task, said agency to have no powers, duties, functions or jurisdiction beyond assembling and compiling and reporting facts relative to local taxation and assessment problems, and be it further

Resolved, That the chairman of the legislative committee of this association be, and hereby is, instructed to transmit on January 5, 1931, duly authenticated copies of this resolution to His Excellency, the Governor of the State of California, the Lieutenant Governor, and the Speaker of the Assembly of the State of California."

Through such an agency it is believed that greater uniformity in assessing methods can be secured with the result that the determination of the average tax burden borne by common property as distinguished from public utility property can be determined with greater accuracy. Such agency might properly aid local assessors in an entire revision of the local assessment roll; the costs for such assistance to be paid by the State. Manuals for setting forth elements or factors and methods of valuation and assessment might properly be prepared by the State and furnished the assessors.

Research department.

To eliminate the recurrent necessity of interim special committees and special commissions, it is recommended that a research department be established in the State Board of Equalization, the same to be under the coordinate control of the Governor, the Board of Equalization and the Director of Finance. This will grant representation from the important fiscal departments as well as the executive department of the State Government, a voice in, and impose a corresponding responsibility toward, securing the broadest character of information on the subject of revenue and taxation and should reduce the possible political aspects thereof to the minimum.

To such agency should be delegated the duty of considering and suggesting methods and means, where found necessary or advisable, to equalize the tax burden on various classes of property, of securing some effective reduction of taxes on real estate, the possible new sources of revenue for State and local purposes and the operation and effect thereof if in force in other states.

Name of State Board of Equalization.

The change in the tax system introduced as a result of the 1906 report changed to a considerable degree the functions of the State Board of Equalization. The name originally selected for the board was suitable for the character of its duty at that time, when its chief function was the equalization of assessments between counties. Due to the changes in methods of taxation, the State Board of Equalization at the present time performs little or no work of equalization. Its time is devoted to the administration of the tax on utilities, the tax on insurance companies, the tax on highway transportation companies and the tax on motor vehicle fuels. Its full equalization functions still exist but no need to exercise them is present in the absence of a deficiency in State revenues and the imposition of a deficiency tax for State purposes upon all property in the State. The present name is therefore a misnomer and it is recommended that the name be changed in keeping with the functions of the board to the "State Tax and Equalization Board."

RECOMMENDATION III.

That the constitution be amended to eliminate the requirement that the counties contribute an amount equal to the contribution of the State for elementary schools and a sum twice the amount contributed by the State for the support of high schools.

Elimination of restriction on State's contribution to schools.

It is recommended that the present provision in the State constitution requiring counties to match the State's contribution for teachers' salaries be changed so the ratio of contribution by the State and the county be not necessarily the same as now existing, such requirement providing, however, that such burden of which the county may be relieved shall be assumed and paid by the State, and not by the district.

As it now stands, the State constitution prevents the State from assuming a larger share of the cost of education without requiring the county to match the State's contribution. Such inelasticity is entirely without supporting reason and should not exist. If the State should desire to increase its aid to schools there is no sound basis for requiring the counties to do likewise.

RECOMMENDATION IV.

That the board of supervisors of the county wherein school districts are located be empowered to review and revise the budgets of school districts.

Review of school district budgets.

Much of the complaint that has reached the committee relative to the excessive tax burdens borne by real estate deals with the cost of the support of educational activities of the local government. The annual report of financial transactions of the State Controller for 1928 shows that at least 30 per cent of the budgets of counties is made up of items for educational purposes. These expenditures are augmented by municipal and district tax levies for the same purpose. The determination of whether or not these expenditures are too great would involve a study of the question of whether or not the present educational expenditures are justifiable. This task is beyond the purpose and power of accomplishment of this committee.

It seems, however, that taxpayers justly complain of the provisions of law which allow boards of school trustees to arbitrarily determine the amount of their budgets and require boards of supervisors of the counties to accept these budgets without power to review or revise them. The fairness of budgets for education purposes as well as for other purposes should be a matter within the jurisdiction of the board of supervisors and one in which the taxpayer ultimately paying the bill should be allowed a hearing.

It is therefore recommended that the board of supervisors of the county shall have the power to review and revise, for the purpose of reduction, the budget for all classes of elementary and high school districts and in such districts that are in two or more counties the board of supervisors of the county in which the greatest area of the assessed valuation of the district lies shall have jurisdiction for such review and revision.

RECOMMENDATION V.

That the Research Bureau, herein referred to, give consideration to devising ways and means to relieving the present excessive tax burden borne by homes, farms and all other real estate taxed locally.

Tax limitations.

No effective or satisfactory method of proposed tax limitation has been suggested to the committee which it feels warranted in recommending to the Legislature. If the limitation is placed upon the rate, the assessments are raised; if upon the assessments of value or increase thereof, the rates are raised. If limitation is placed upon both rate and value, the orderly functioning and progress of government may be halted, or strangled to an undesirable degree, and the right of self-government too seriously handicapped.

In several states, namely, Indiana, Utah, Iowa, and Kansas, the state boards or tax commissions, upon demand of comparatively few taxpayers may require that local budgets, including bond issues, be reviewed and approve or disapprove or modify the same. It is claimed that appeals to such board have been few, and that the plan has actually resulted in conservative budgets or bond proposals in the first instance. It seems improbable that the several communities of California would surrender such power to a State agency.

In New Mexico it is provided that no county, municipality or school district shall increase the tax levies in any one year in excess of 5 per cent of the total levy for the preceding year, except in case of certain emergencies, in which case it is presented to a certain state board for approval. For like reasons applicable to the so-called Indiana plan, the New Mexico plan seems unadaptable to California.

Further suggestions have been made by the California Real Estate Board and affiliated groups providing for a gradual reduction of the tax burden on real estate for State, county and municipal purposes, so that by 1942 real estate therein will be limited to pay not to exceed 50 per cent of the budgeted requirements thereof. Such a limitation would of necessity compel adoption of new or other forms of taxation to supply the deficiency thus created. If the 1927 commission plan should ultimately be adopted, or should the State return to the general ad valorem plan, then the reduction would become effective alike upon public utility real estate as well as upon common property. It is claimed that real estate now pays 80 per cent of the cost of local government. A reduction to 50 per cent would indeed be a substantial one; and, if this plan of limitation is applicable alike to public utility and common property, the amounts required to be raised from new or added sources would be large. While there is a manifest desire to relieve the tax burden on real estate, and, if possible, to put a practical limitation thereon, it seems doubtful whether the State at large would approve such a limitation if it must also apply equally to public utility real estate or be reflected by a substantial reduction in their taxes. If the present separation of sources plan is retained and the proposed limitation plan adopted, the question remains as to whether or not the added revenues which would have to be raised to meet the lessening of revenues from real estate taxes can be applied only to county or local purposes, or should be divided between State and local government. Other groups interested in this general question of reduction of the local tax burden on real estate locally taxed suggest that the State take over and pay the cost, or at least make greater contribution to, the support of certain activities, such as schools, so as to correspondingly lighten the tax burden on locally taxed real estate. If the additional contribution by the State would in fact reduce the local tax burden as it should, then it would appear that the tax limitation plan suggested by the California real estate group would not only be unnecessary, but would in fact be impracticable. It will require new sources of revenue yielding large returns if the burden on locally taxed real estate, as now taxed, and on present values, it is to be reduced from an 80 per cent contribution to a 50 per cent contribution annually: estimates place the figure in the neighborhood of $900,000,000. Should the State take over such added functions and the proposed 50 per cent limitation become effective, it would be necessary to secure still added sources of revenues, either for the counties and municipalities to levy locally, or in the form of State collected monies to be remitted to the counties and municipalities. It would require the highest practical tax rates to secure sufficient revenues from all suggested sources of revenues, such as incomes and sales taxes, to meet the cost of added State participation, and under the proposed limitation, there would still remain a deficiency of 50 per cent of the local tax burden to be financed from sources other than a tax on real estate.

It would appear advisable for those interested to determine upon, if possible, and recommend some definite theory or principle upon which the State is to be asked to proceed, whether it be that the State take over and assume the cost of certain governmental activities, either in whole or in part, and thus lighten the local tax burden, or whether it be the levy of a State tax with refund to the counties and municipalities to accomplish the same result.

The two methods are inconsistent with each other and a choice must be made. Further considering this particular plan of limitation, it may be added that no definite proposals of legislation, as to the priorities of several tax levies, or the effect of overlapping invalid levies, have been suggested; nor has any definite suggestion been made as to a definite new source of revenue. Certain elasticity must be provided as to tax levies, for the functions of government must continue; and before a source of revenue is frozen, reasonable certainty as to sources and amounts of additional revenues should be available. The State should hesitate before fixing an arbitrary limit on one source of revenue when it does not know how the deficiency resulting from the limitation is to be replaced. Accordingly, as this suggestion was made to the committee since January 1 last, and in view of its importance and the comprehensive effect thereof on State and local government, it is suggested that the matter of tax limitation be given special consideration and study by the research bureau herein recommended.

At a number of the hearings held by the committee in different cities of the State, individual taxpayers appeared and complained of the burden of taxes levied against their homes, farms and business properties. In every instance it was disclosed that the burden complained of was due to the aggregate taxes levied by county, city, and district authority, including not only taxes for ordinary governmental expenses, but also bills to meet payments for interest and principal upon bonds. In many instances special assessments added to the burden.

It is of these taxes that the average citizen complains most bitterly. They are direct taxes levied upon his real and personal property that are payable in a lump sum and can not be shifted. That the burden of local taxation is exacting and sometimes inequitable, the committee readily admits. Many suggested panaceas for the alleviation of this burden have been proposed to this committee, but none of these appears practical or workable. This committee believes that real estate should be in some measure relieved of the severity of the exaction now made from it. However, in view of the impracticability of the methods suggested the committee hesitates to express any recommendation for a definite plan of action to accomplish this purpose. This problem, more than any other, should be considered with the purpose of our entire tax system in mind. Following a full study of the research department recommended to be established in this report, some plan that is practical may be evolved. But in any case and under any system, the matter and amount of local taxes will remain largely a local question as assessments and tax rates are determined by local authorities. Only through rigid economy, careful scrutiny of proposed bond issues and restriction of special assessments and tax levies coupled with the courage to admit that many desirable things can not be afforded, can any appreciable reduction in local taxes be secured.

RECOMMENDATION VI.

That the Legislature of the State take appropriate action designed to secure an amendment to section 5219 of the revised statutes of the United States so that the State will be permitted greater latitude in the taxation of national banks.

BANK TAXATION IN CALIFORNIA.

Introduction.

Of particular importance in the problems confronting this committee has been the problem of taxation of banks in this State. It will be remembered that the State changed its method of taxation of banks by a constitutional amendment adopted in 1928, followed by legislation of the 1929 session of the Legislature. This committee would be happy to report that the legislation of the last legislative session proved efficacious as an equitable solution of the bank tax difficulty. The committee, however, is unable to do so. The present situation, with respect to bank taxation, calls for a critical analysis and a detailed presentation, in order that the Governor and the members of the Legislature may be accurately informed of the precise problem existing with respect to the tax status of these institutions, particularly existing legal difficulties and the tax burden of these institutions as compared with the burden of other taxpayers. To understand fully the present condition of banks in the State's revenue system it is necessary to sketch, briefly, the history of bank taxation in this State.

TAXATION OF BANKS BEFORE 1929.

Prior to 1910 banks were taxed upon their real property and the shareholders were taxed upon the value of their shares of stock by the local assessors. The 1906 Tax Commission found the method of taxation then existing to be very unsatisfactory. A case had been carried to the Supreme Court of the United States which had decided that, as between state banks and national banks, national banks were being discriminated against in the treatment.¹ The 1906 commission reported:

"Since that time (the decision in the case of S. F. National Bank vs. Dodge) national banks have been locally taxable only on whatever real estate they might hold. As the law discountenances the holding of real estate by these banks, save for bank premises, the taxes on this are a very small proportion of what is properly due from these banks for the benefits conferred upon them by the state and local governments. Some few of the national banks, realizing this, have voluntarily submitted to an assessment that they knew was not enforceable by law and have paid taxes thereon. The number of banks showing this conscientious and patriotic spirit is not large, nor has their generosity in this direction been carried to any quixotic length, as the amount they thus contribute to the support of governments is never very large, nor even approximately what should be required of them."²

In view of this condition, part of the burden assumed by the 1906 Tax Commission was the devising of an adequate and legal method for the taxation of banks. To fulfill this function the commission of 1906 and its successor, the commission of 1909, included in the proposals for a unified tax system a complete plan for the taxation of national and State banks.

As national banks are agencies of the federal government, the power of a state to tax these institutions must be derived from permissive federal legislation. The national Congress has given the states this permission, the specific statute, title XIII, paragraph 548, sub-paragraph 1-b M. S. Code, more commonly, and hereafter referred to as section 5219 United States Revised Statutes.

At the time the 1910 commission's recommendation was enacted as law, section 5219 permitted only the real estate and shares of capital stock of national banks to be taxed.¹ The method thus followed by the commission was the so-called "share tax" method. This method of taxation comprehended that banks were to be locally taxed upon their real property and the shareholders of the banks were to be taxed by the State upon the value of their shares of stock.

The method of determining the value of each share of stock was fixed by the constitution as the amount paid in thereon, together with its pro rata of the accumulated surplus and undivided profits. In computing the total value of shares of stock the assessed value of real estate taxed for county purposes was deducted. The rate of tax upon this value at the time of the adoption of the amendment in 1910 was fixed at one per cent. During the history of the tax this rate was changed three times.²

The method of taxing banks inaugurated by the 1906 commission proved satisfactory for a period of eighteen years. In commenting upon the results of the system, the 1927 commission said:

"In general, the experience under the present plan of taxing banks has been good. The method provided is definite, and there has been no complaint of discrimination as amongst banks. The rates have been changed on three occasions, and although these changes, and particularly the change made in 1921, provoked considerable controversy, and although some of the bankers now feel that they are heavily taxed, it may be said the present method has given fair satisfaction both to the State and to the banks."³

From a revenue standpoint, particularly, the experience of the State between 1910 and 1928, in taxing banks upon their shares of stock proved satisfactory. The revenues derived under this system during the time it was in operation are shown by schedule "A."

THE 1928 AMENDMENT TO THE CONSTITUTION.

Early in its labors the Statutory Tax Commission of 1927 turned its attention to the matter of bank taxation. During the 1927 session of the Legislature, the Legislature had been forced to increase the rate of taxation on securities and solvent credits to avoid possible discrimination against national banks. The commission was of the opinion that the same decisions of the Supreme Court of the United States responsible for the 1927 legislative change in the tax rates on intangibles entirely condemned the California method of taxation of national banks.⁴ It is unnecessary to review here in detail the decisions of the United States Supreme Court which caused the 1927 commission to be concerned as to the legality of the California method of taxation and convinced the commission that the method was invalid. It is only necessary to remark that one of the restrictive conditions of section 5219—that the rate of tax on national bank shares can not be greater than the rate of tax upon competing moneyed capital—had been broadened by interpretations of the Supreme Court of the United States to the effect that mortgages and intangible properties were construed to be competing moneyed capital. In the opinion of the commission, the allowance under the California law of mortgage exemptions, preferential treatment of intangibles and the deduction of debts from the assessed value of solvent credits to individuals unjustly discriminated against stockholders in national banks when such stockholders were taxed upon the full value of their shares.

Within the last two years many cases have been decided by the federal courts holding the share tax method in other states to be invalid, because of one or more discriminating features, some of which, at least, were present in the California law prior to its amendment in 1929.

⁵ Special report of the California Tax Commission, 1929 report, pages 250-264.

The situation was so patently critical to the Statutory Tax Commission that the commission argued that unless immediate action was taken by the State to solve the bank tax difficulty the State would have revenues in jeopardy amounting to $22,050,000. The commission, therefore, recommended that the Governor call a special session of the Legislature to consider the problem. This was done. This session of the Legislature approved the submission of what is now section 16 of article XIII to the voters at the November 1928 general election. The people of the State adopted the amendment. The final step in the commission's plan of reform was the passage of legislation to carry into effect the new constitutional provision. This legislation was prepared under the direction of the commission and upon the recommendation of the commission was passed by the Legislature and approved by the Governor. The legislation became chapter 13 of the Statutes of 1929 and has the short title "Bank and Corporation Franchise Tax Act."

By section 16 of article XIII, the new method for the taxation of banks comprehends the taxation of banks according to or measured by their net income. The "according to or measured by net income" method is the method of paragraph (c) of section 5219, as amended in 1926. Section 5219 at the time the State adopted section 16 of article XIII read as it does now. The text of this section is set out below.

"Sec. 5219. The Legislature of each state may determine and direct, subject to the provisions of this section, the manner and place of taxing all the shares of national banking associations located within its limits. The several states may (1) tax said shares, or (2) include dividends derived therefrom in the taxable income of an owner or holder thereof, or (3) tax such associations on their net income, or (4) according to or measured by their net income, provided the following conditions are complied with:

1. (a) The imposition by any state of any one of the above four forms of taxation shall be in lieu of the others, except as hereinafter provided in subdivision (c) of this clause.

(b) In the case of a tax on said shares the tax imposed shall not be at a greater rate than is assessed upon other moneyed capital in the hands of individual citizens of such state coming into competition with the business of national banks; provided, that bonds, notes, or other evidences of indebtedness in the hands of individual citizens not employed or engaged in the banking or investments not made in competition with such business, shall not be deemed moneyed capital within the meaning of this section.

(c) In case of a tax on or according to or measured by the net income of an association, the taxing state may, except in case of a tax on net income, include the entire net income received from all sources, but the rate shall not be higher than the rate assessed upon other financial corporations nor higher than the highest of the rates assessed by the taxing state upon mercantile, manufacturing and business corporations doing business within its limits; provided, however, that a state which imposes a tax on or according to or measured by the net income of, or a franchise or excise tax on, financial, mercantile, manufacturing, and business corporations organized under its own laws or laws of other states and also imposes a tax upon the income of individuals, may include in such individual income dividends from national banking associations located within the state on condition that it also includes dividends from domestic corporations and may likewise include dividends from national banking associations located without the State on condition that it also includes dividends from foreign corporations, but at no higher rate than is imposed on dividends from such other corporations.

(d) In case the dividends derived from the said shares are taxed, the tax shall not be at a greater rate than is assessed upon the net income from other moneyed capital.

2. The shares of any national banking association owned by nonresidents of any state, shall be taxed by the taxing district or by the state where the association is located and not elsewhere; and such association shall make return of such shares and pay the tax thereon as agent of such nonresident shareholders.

3. Nothing herein shall be construed to exempt the real property of associations from taxation in any state or in any subdivision thereof, to the same extent, according to its value, as other real property is taxed.

4. The provisions of section 5219 of the Revised Statutes of the United States as heretofore in force shall not prevent the legalizing, ratifying, or confirming by the states of any tax heretofore paid, levied, or assessed upon the shares of national banks, or the collecting thereof, to the extent that such tax would be valid under said section."

PRESENT STATUS OF BANK TAXATION IN CALIFORNIA.

Legal aspects.

Certain aspects of bank taxation since the passage of the Bank and Corporation Franchise Tax Act required that the problem of bank and corporation taxes be considered jointly. This committee has reached the conclusion that the present method of taxation of banks in California is unsatisfactory both from a fiscal and a legal viewpoint. This determination, however, has involved a consideration of section 5219 of the Revised Statutes of the United States, which statute is the State's sole authority for the taxation of national banks. After full consideration of the possible methods of bank taxation, the committee recommends that for the present the method of taxing banks, be retained, as it presents less legal difficulties than any other method. California's difficulties in bank taxation inhere in the rigid provisions of section 5219 of the Revised Statutes of the United States. Until this statute is amended, the State can not hope for greater latitude in the matter of taxation of these associations. In an attempt to secure an amendment to section 5219, the committee will submit its views by filing a brief with the Senate and House committees on Banking and Currency and by providing each member of the California delegation in Congress with a copy of the brief. The brief will express the legal problems involved in the taxation of national banks and for that reason will be printed as an appendix to the published report. Because of the statement of the problem therein, it is unnecessary to duplicate the discussion here.

FISCAL ASPECTS OF THE TAX ON BANKS "ACCORDING TO OR MEASURED BY NET INCOME" METHOD.

During the period that the Bank and Corporation Franchise Tax Act has been in operation, sufficient time has elapsed so that corporations and banks have been required to file at least two returns with the Franchise Tax Commissioner upon which a tax has been based. From the returns on file in the office of the Franchise Tax Commissioner a study has been made of the revenue contributed by banks to the State upon their net income. The returns were examined to ascertain for every bank doing business in this State the amount of federal net income; additions to federal net income; the amount of deductions from federal income such as federal income tax paid; the net income for State purposes; the amount of tax before offset; the amount of the offset and the resultant tax. After the completion of this investigation the office of the Franchise Tax Commissioner began an independent research to gather the same data.

COMPARISON OF REVENUE YIELD OF SHARE TAX AND INCOME TAX

There is a sharp diminution in the revenues paid by banks under the new method when compared with receipts under the former share tax. In 1928, under the share tax, banks paid over $4,700,000 to the State in taxes. In 1929 the yield was reduced to less than $550,000, and in 1930 the yield was less than $908,000.¹

The 1927 commission, by inference from sample data which showed that banks paid 11.8 per cent of their net income in taxes under the share tax, while corporations paid 4.4 per cent of their net income in franchise and personal property taxes, determined that the tax on banks under the share tax was too high.² It was conceded by the commission that the new tax would substantially reduce the yield from banks, the commission estimate being that the new tax would yield one-third of the old tax without the real estate offset and about 1.1 million dollars with the real estate offset.³ Even with the substantial reductions predicted by the commission, however, the yield has not been up to expectations.

The first year of the income measure yielded about one-third of the tax paid by banks in 1911 when the share tax was first introduced and the rate was 1 per cent and only one-eighth the tax paid by banks in 1928, the last year in which the share tax method was in operation, and the rate 1.45 per cent. The second year of the income measure shows some improvement in the revenues derived as compared with the first year of the new tax, but the net yield still falls short of the revenues accruing under the share tax method. Revenues paid in 1930 by banks exceed the revenues paid in 1929 by $343,000.

Despite the percentage of increase of the 1930 taxes over 1929 taxes, the contributions of banks to the support of the State government are rendered meager when compared with the tax accruing to the State from the same source in 1928 under the share tax method. The taxes paid by banks in 1930 are less than one-fifth of the taxes paid in 1928 under the former share tax.

THEORY OF THE BANK TAX AS A BUSINESS TAX.

It was the intention of the 1927 Tax Commission that the tax on banks, which they inaugurated, should be a forerunner for the modification of the theory of the property tax. It was intended that the property tax should be ultimately resolved into a tax upon real estate alone, and that proposed business and personal taxes should be developed and put into operation to supply revenues displaced by the abandonment of the property tax concept. This was one of the elements which the commission has in mind in presenting the method of taxation of banks and corporations under section 16 of article XIII.

As the other recommendations of the Tax Commission were not accepted by the Legislature, the system of taxation advised by the 1927 commission became effective for banks and corporations alone. As a result, banks are the only type of corporate organizations in the State whose tax is not in some way related to their entire property holdings. Local taxes upon their real property are measured by the property standard, but the balance of their tax depends solely upon their ability to pay through use of the income measure. All other business enterprises and individuals are taxed under the benefit theory, upon their property, and must pay a tax upon the value of their property holdings, whether the ability is or is not present.

The present method of taxation, therefore, accomplishes the 1929 commission's desideratum for banks alone, and banks thus occupy a position of unique advantage in the State's tax system where they are taxed only upon their real property and by an excise tax, while all other corporations are taxed either directly or by a commutated tax upon their real property, their tangible personal property and upon their intangible assets (franchises) or by an excise measure.¹

In considering the relative merits of the property tax upon banks as comprehended by the share tax method and the present method of taxation upon the excise basis, it is to be observed that the share tax method had the advantage over the present excise measure—that banks were taxed upon the same basis, the basis of property, as all other taxpayers. Under this method of taxation every bank in the State contributed at least something to the support of the State government. The present system of taxation, founded upon the theory of ability to pay, instead of benefits received, in its practical operation has the effect of exempting many banking institutions from State taxation. Such a method could be theoretically justified if, instead of an exception, it was a component part of a coordinated system of taxation where every taxpayer was entitled to have some portion of his total tax burden measured by the ability theory. The effect, however, of setting banks up as a special class has had the result of rendering our tax system susceptible to the criticisms of other groups of taxpayers upon whom the State depends for much of its revenue.

In the face of such criticisms it is pertinent to note the comparison between the burden on banks under the excise tax and the burden on common property which theoretically is the basic common measure for the determination of tax rates.

RATIO BETWEEN 1928 TAXABLE VALUE OF SHARES OF STOCK AND 1929 AND 1930 TAXES.

	Taxable value of shares ² as of March 1, 1928	Taxes 1929	Ratio of 1929 taxes to value. Percentage	Taxes 1930	Ratio of 1930 taxes to share value. Percentage
National Banks----	175,600,000	316,402	00.17	549,176	00.31
State Banks-----	153,100,000	232,458	00.13	356,493	00.23
Total -----	328,700,000	548,850	00.15	907,669	00.27

The burden on common property was determined by the State Board of Equalization for the year 1928 to be 1.8 per cent on actual value. In 1929 under the "according to or measured by net income" tax the tax burden on taxable value of shares of stock in banks was only 8.3 per cent of this average burden on common property for 1928.³ In 1930 the tax burden on bank shares was only 15 per cent of the tax burden on common property. These figures assume, of course, that the tax on banks is not declared invalid insofar as income from tax-exempt sources is concerned.

Despite this disparity in tax burdens, the committee deems it inadvisable to increase the tax on banks at the present time. Until section 5219 of the United States Revised Statutes is amended, the present method of taxation for banks should be continued. The condition of this fourth method, that the tax rate on banks be not higher than that assessed upon other financial corporations nor higher than the highest of the rates assessed upon mercantile, manufacturing and business corporations, would require that if the rate on banks was increased, the rate upon corporations must be increased also. The committee does not feel that it would be sound policy to excessively tax all corporations in the State merely to increase the banks tax yield, particularly so, when industry is in such a depressed condition.

The suggestions that have been made for a change in bank taxation in the opinion of the committee can not be adopted with assurance. One of the suggestions is that the State return to the share tax method of taxing banking institutions. This, if held to be valid, would undoubtedly increase the revenue. In view of the decisions of the United States Supreme Court, however, it is felt that the method would allow national banks to claim discrimination on the ground that mortgages are exempt from taxation, intangible properties are treated preferentially, and a deduction is allowed from assessment on credits for debts due residents.

² Taxable value of shares is determined by dividing the taxes paid by national and State banks by the rate of 1.45 per cent. In 1928, taxes assessed by the State board amounted to 2.5 millions for national banks and 2.2 millions for State banks.

³ This is computed by dividing the average tax burden into the tax burden on the taxable value of bank shares.

The other possible solution that has been advocated is that the offset provisions in the Bank and Corporation Franchise Tax Act be abolished and that banks be taxed at a flat rate of 4 per cent, while corporations are taxed at a rate in the neighborhood of 2.25 per cent. The justification for this, it is argued, is that corporations pay personal property taxes which banks do not pay, and the personal property taxes paid by corporations could be used as a measure of comparison with the tax on banks in addition to the tax paid by corporations according to or measured by their net income. The committee feels, however, that such a method of taxation would be unknown in its effect upon corporations, and, further, would be subject to legal question as far as the validity of the tax on national banks is concerned as such associations might establish that corporations were being taxed at a lower rate. For these reasons the committee recommends that the present system of taxing banks be retained until an amendment to section 5219 of the Revised Statutes of the United States is adopted and the states are allowed greater latitude in the matter of bank taxation.

Withdrawal of right to file consolidated returns.

While the committee does not believe it advisable at the present time to increase the rate of tax on bonds, it does propose that our benefit now allowed to banks be withdrawn. This is the right of a bank to file a consolidated return with a non-banking corporate subsidiary. At the present time banks are allowed to file a consolidated return with an ordinary business corporation when there is an affiliation in corporate organization. The effect of this has been that banks are allowed to write off against their net income losses sustained by the subsidiary and, also, to take advantage of the offset provision by reducing its tax on account of local taxes paid by its subsidiary.

TAXATION OF CORPORATIONS.

The 1927 commission considered the problem of taxation of banks and corporations to be an interrelated one, and in its plans for the revision of the tax on banks, the problem of taxation of corporations formed an integral part.

Until 1929, corporations were taxed under the method proposed by the 1906 commission. The 1906 commission had found that the method then existing of taxing special franchises and general franchises of corporations by local assessors was entirely unsatisfactory. The 1906 commission carefully analyzed the subject, and its report contained explanations of the legal effect and economic incidents of such a tax that has not since been surpassed.

The 1910 commission successfully carried out the plans of the 1906 commission for the taxation of corporations and, until 1929, corporations, except the utility, bank, and insurance groups, were taxed under the provisions of Amendment Number One upon their franchise value as determined by the State Board of Equalization.¹

The commission of 1917 criticized the franchise method of taxation, but apparently did not believe that it was necessary to change the method as its recommendations contemplated that the franchise tax be retained as part of the State's tax system.² The franchise method of taxation continued until 1929.

THE 1929 COMMISSION'S RECOMMENDATIONS FOR A CHANGE IN THE FRANCHISE TAX.

The 1929 commission considered the franchise tax on corporations as a joint problem with the tax upon banks and prevailed upon the Legislature to treat both types of business enterprises in the same manner.

The reasons underlying the change by the commission are disclosed by the following excerpt from its report:³

"The trend in modern tax reform is distinctly away from the theory of the general property tax. Tangible property, or at least land and buildings, will doubtless continue to be taxed where located and without deduction for debts. In addition to such property taxation, there is rapidly being developed a system of business taxes imposed where the business activity is carried on, and measured by the earnings of the business or by some approximation thereto. In connection with its statistical study, the results of which are set forth later in this report, the commission's technical staff has subjected the present franchise tax to an exhaustive test with respect to its adequacy as a modern business tax, and measured by this test, as will be seen from the figures there presented, it is without merit. * * *

"The commission has a positive reason for suggesting a change in the form of the present franchise tax. It wishes to make it available for use as an element in the solution of the tax in operation leads to the conclusion that there are no strong reasons for preserving the present form of the tax. On the contrary, the proposed changes in the form of the tax may be expected to improve greatly its equity and general usefulness as a business tax."

This excerpt from the special report may be considered to state the commission's theoretical and legal case justifying the treatment of the franchise tax as an emergency measure. The theoretical argument was that the trend in modern tax reform is distinctly away from the theory of the general property tax and as the franchise tax was a property tax it should be discarded; the legal argument was that the commission wished to validate the tax on banks.

Upon the whole, the tax upon corporations under the "According to or measured by income" statute has been satisfactory. It is true that including banks and corporations in the same tax statute presents questions which would not otherwise arise and in some respects make the taxing statute artificial in nature. These difficulties, however, can only be eliminated by having a distinct basis for the tax on banks and the tax on corporations. The present measure furnishes a satisfactory basis for the taxation of corporations and should be retained. Basic improvement in the act can not be made until a different method for the taxation of banks is provided by concessions from the federal government in the form of liberal amendments to section 5219 of the Revised Statutes of the United States.

The improvement of greatest merit that could be effected would be to have an established rate of tax for all corporations. This would necessitate the elimination of the offset for taxes on real and personal property paid to localities and a corresponding reduction in the amount of the tax rate. Under the provisions of the act at the present time, all corporations are taxed at the rate of 4 per cent according to or measured by their net income. On the amount of the tax thus determined, they are allowed an offset up to 75 per cent of the amount of the tax for taxes paid to localities but in no case can more than 10 per cent of real property taxes be used as an offset.

In other states where the offset feature has been a part of the tax statute, it has been abandoned for a straight tax on or according to or measured by net income. Four states, Mississippi, Missouri, North Dakota and Wisconsin have attempted to utilize this device but have found it to be unsatisfactory. In a publication by the National Industrial Conference Board, Inc., the history of the offset provision in these states is given.¹

"Four states, Mississippi, Missouri, North Dakota and Wisconsin, have experimented with provisions in their tax laws allowing the taxpayer to offset against the income tax the amount of property tax paid. In Wisconsin, the original act of 1911 contained a provision allowing the taxpayer to offset against the income tax the amount of personal property tax paid. The law was in effect until 1925, when it was repealed, leaving the income tax a part of the tax system separate and distinct from the personal property tax. Under the Wisconsin plan, the taxpayer paid the personal property tax when it exceeded the income tax and paid the income tax when it exceeded the personal property tax. The original intent of the Wisconsin legislature was to supplant the personal property tax with the income tax, but it was thought advisable to retain the personal property tax until the income tax had become established as a part of the fiscal system. It was further believed that the difficulty of administering the personal property tax would be overcome, since the taxpayer would pay the personal property tax in order to reduce the income tax.

"This system, no doubt, had some effect in increasing the valuations of personal property. Prior to its adoption, owners of personal property escaped the property tax. Under the 'personal property offset' plan, it was possible to exact some tax from all persons having any taxpaying ability, indicated by either property or income. However, when the owner of personal property had no income tax to pay because of allowable deductions from gross income, the incentive to pay the personal property tax was removed. Administrative difficulties were experienced with the Wisconsin provision, because (1) taxpayers desired to have personal property classified in real property, (2) many taxpayers prepared returns when no tax was due and thus incurred considerable expense to the state.

"A further objection to the use of the 'personal property offset' is the interference with the application of the progressive income tax rates. For example, assume that A receives $10,000 net income from property, and B receives $10,000 for personal services, and that A's personal property tax is equal to or less than his income tax. A and B will pay the same amount of tax, but A has greater taxpaying ability since a portion of his income is funded. If A's property tax should exceed the income tax, then it would work out so that A would pay a larger tax than B, although their incomes are equal. The personal property offset at least served one useful purpose in Wisconsin, and that was to insure revenues while the income tax was still in the experimental stage.

"North Dakota, probably influenced by the Wisconsin plan, introduced the 'personal property offset' in 1919. Objections similar to those in Wisconsin were raised and it was repealed after only a few years experience with it. Under the Missouri Act of 1917, the taxpayer was allowed to offset against the income tax both real and personal property taxes. The provision purported to substitute the income tax for the property tax for state purposes. The property offset so seriously affected the yield of the income tax that it was repealed after two years' trial."

Exact data in this State are difficult to obtain, but from the best evidence available, it seems that the offset provisions work to the advantage of the large corporations possessing large property holdings to the disadvantage of the small corporations that own little, or leases, business property. For the present, the offset provision can be justified as an expedient in that it insures to the State a minimum amount of revenue and requires each corporation to pay taxes either to the State or local government equivalent to the amount of taxes paid by national banking associations.

Allowance for depletion.

There are many changes which can be made in the statute at the present time which will tend to improve it. The chief of these is that the depletion allowance in the case of oil and gas wells be restricted to the allowance under the federal statute. At the present time, oil companies are allowed to compute their allowance for depletion either upon the basis of the Federal Revenue Act or under section 19 of the Bank and Corporation Franchise Tax Act. Under the provisions of section 19 of the Bank and Corporation Franchise Tax Act, January 1, 1928, is established as a basic date from which to measure gains and losses for property acquired prior to said date. Under the Federal Revenue Act the basic date is March 1, 1913. The use of the 1928 basic date has worked to the distinct advantage of oil corporations. Many of these concerns paid the minimum tax of $25 because of the liberal depletion allowance they were able to take by using the January 1, 1928, value on their properties. It is therefore recommended that the act be amended so that the allowance for depletion in the case of oil and gas wells will be computed on the same basis as under the Federal Revenue Act of 1928. This the committee believes will result in increased taxes from these organizations to the extent of $300,000.

Deficiency assessments.

Under the provisions of section 25 of the act, the Franchise Tax Commissioner has authority to assess a deficiency tax against a corporation whenever he determines that the tax disclosed by the original return is less than the tax disclosed by the examination by the commissioner. The only limitation of time to make this examination is that the commissioner make it "as soon as practicable after the return is filed." The Bank and Corporation Franchise Tax Act has not been in force long enough for serious questions to arise under the provisions of this section. It should be remembered, however, that the tax to be paid by corporations, is, under the act, a lien upon all the property of the corporation as of the first Monday of March. It is very possible that the title to the property of corporations may in many instances become clouded because of the failure of the corporation to correctly state the amount of its tax in original return and a deficiency assessment levied thereafter by the administrator of the act. Some limitation should be placed upon the time within which a deficiency assessment may be levied. This will insure to corporations that their tax liability has ended and no further taxes for the taxable year for which a return has been filed will be assessed.

Refunds.

Under the provisions of the Bank and Corporation Franchise Tax Act, where a tax has been illegally or erroneously computed, the corporation is entitled to a refund of the amount erroneously or illegally assessed. There is no limitation of time within which such refunds should be claimed. It is possible that due to suits now pending, corporations that have not protested their tax payments were entitled to a refund of such part of their tax. All such refunds bear interest at the rate of 6 per cent per annum. It is possible under this provision for a taxpayer not to contest the validity of certain provisions of the act but to allow other taxpayers to assume this burden. If such taxpayers contesting the act are successful, then all corporations having a similar question in their returns would be entitled to the benefit of the refund provision. This provision should be so reconstructed that before a corporation would be entitled to a refund it would be necessary for the corporation to file a protest and bring a suit upon the protest within a specified time.

Definition of "doing business," and other amendments.

The present definition of "doing business" in the act excludes many corporations from the tax provision of the act. The committee recommends that this definition be so revised that all corporations having the right to do business be included within the provisions of the statutes.

Other amendments of a minor nature should be made in the act which would strengthen the act and improve its administration. These include: the allowance of a deduction for federal income taxes, for only that portion of the tax payable upon California business, and a change of one month in the time for final suspension for nonpayment of taxes and the surcease of tax liability.

MINORITY REPORT OF ASSEMBLYMAN ISAAC JONES.

I find myself not in accord with the foregoing report in the following particulars:

First—Regarding the present system of separation of sources.

Second—Regarding a personal income tax law.

Third—Regarding the membership of the governing board of the Research Department if created in the Board of Equalization.

First. I can not join in the recommendation of the majority of the committee: "That for the present the existing system of State taxation involving 'separation of sources' be retained."

The author of that system, Professor Carl C. Plehn, in a statement to the 1921 Revenue and Taxation Committee of the Senate and Assembly, in joint session, declared that the system was never designed to carry the load being imposed upon it and that the plan of gross receipts taxes had broken down under the burden. The professor was speaking of the system in operation under the provisions of so-called Amendment No. 1. (I am writing from memory; probably I am not repeating the professor's exact words, but the essence of his statement is contained in the language I have used.)

I consider that Professor Plehn was justified in his statement to the Legislative committees in 1921 and I believe that the breakdown has become intensified in the years that have passed since the 1921 session.

The gross receipts plan of taxation or the "separation of sources of revenue under the provisions of 'Amendment No. 1,'" has not conformed to the requirements of good government; the greatest good to the greatest number. It has tended to place the greater tax burden where the load cannot properly be placed, and has lessened the load on taxpayers who justly should bear a heavier burden.

It was promised for Amendment No. 1 that, under its provisions, all future fiscal needs of the State would be met by the gross receipts tax on public utilities and that the result of writing this amendment into the constitution would be a reduced tax on real estate in the counties. These promises for its operation have not been justified.

Under the working of Amendment No. 1 the public utilities corporations have been relieved of all burden of local taxation, and it is justly claimed, the utilities have, to a very considerable degree, succeeded in passing the tax burden that properly belongs to them to the consumer of the utility. While the gross receipts plan of taxation in California has been a good plan for the corporations, it has not been a good plan for the common property owners.

At the same time, during the years that have passed since the adoption of Amendment No. 1, the State has increased the number and character of its functions and has imposed an unfair portion of this increased burden of maintenance upon the counties. An example of the burden unfairly imposed upon the counties is found in the matter of support of the schools, orphans' aid, the needy blind, and assistance for the aged. These are all matters of great importance and matters that should be fully supported, but the support should come from the State as a whole and not from the counties.

Of the great number of briefs received by this committee none was unqualified in praise of the present system; even those utility companies occupying a favored position at the present time admitted the faults and shortcomings of the system.

Under the tax system provided by Amendment No. 1 there can be no such adjustment of the rates as will impose even approximately a just and equitable burden of taxation between the public utility property on the one hand and common property on the other, between the property of the different classes of public utilities, or even between the property of different utility companies of the same class.

Further, in its operation, the tax system provided under Amendment No. 1 unjustly imposes an additional tax burden upon some of the counties of the State and with the same injustice lightens the tax burden upon other counties.

Under this system an equitable tax burden is impossible. This injustice to the counties was recognized at the time Amendment No. 1 was adopted and, because of this fact, the constitutional amendment contained the following provision: "Until the year 1918 the State shall reimburse any and all counties which sustain loss of revenue by the withdrawal of railroad property from county taxation for the net loss in county revenue occasioned by the withdrawal of railroad property from county taxation."

Commenting upon the loss sustained by the counties, the Tax Commission of 1917, page 126 of the report, said as follows:

"Another adjustment which it is necessary to make is that in the case of counties suffering because of the withdrawal of railroad property. If the present system of separation is continued, in all fairness it will be necessary to make adjustments with counties suffering net losses because of the withdrawal of all operative property of public utilities.

"Under the present provision of the constitution, adjustment can be made between the State and the several counties only for losses suffered on account of the withdrawal of the railroad property. (Provision not operative after 1918.)

"This commission has made a detailed study of this particular phase of the matter and recommends a change in the present method of determining the loss.

"Under the method adopted by this commission it was found that San Bernardino County, which is the heaviest sufferer, lost $134,016.93 more than she had been reimbursed during the five years from 1911 to 1915.

"Figures on the other counties will be presented later during the session, if it shall appear that where a county has suffered on account of the withdrawal of operative property other than operative railroad property, adjustments of the loss should be made. There is no good reason why reimbursement should be made for loss sustained by the withdrawal of operative railroad property than for loss sustained by the withdrawal of other operative property.

"If a county has suffered loss in the past or should suffer loss in the future because of the development of public utilities, that loss should be in some way adjusted either between the State and the county or between the different counties themselves. There certainly is no justice in allowing one county to gain and another county to lose because of the present system of separation under Amendment No. 1."

Continuing on page 129 of the report, the Tax Commission of 1917 says:

"In approaching a possible solution remedying the evils which have been pointed out as existing under the present rigid provision in the constitution, it is hardly necessary to say that to leave the present system stand as it is would be an utterly irresponsible way of handling the matter. Such a procedure would lead to continued and greater inequality and injustice."

I believe that the portions of the report of the 1917 commission that I have here set out were printed in that document as the result of clear vision, and sound logic on the part of the commission. I believe that their finding in 1917 is applicable to the situation as it exists today. The Martin Commission of 1929 is in substantial accord with the report of the 1917 body. I am convinced that the conclusions set out in these reports are correct.

I therefore consider recommendations First, Second, Third and Fourth on page XXII of the Martin Commission report correct in theory and justified by fact, and that it is for the best interest of the taxpayers of the State of California that these recommendations be enacted into law.

Second. Recommendation No. 6 of the Martin report is as follows:

"Sixth. That the people of the State be given an opportunity to record clearly their desire regarding the substitution of a personal income tax for the present tax on intangible personal property and such other classes of personal property as it may prove desirable to eliminate from the tax base."

I believe the tax situation as it exists in California not only justified but emphatically demands that a personal income tax be provided. The constitution authorizes a personal income tax. The Tax Commission of 1917 suggested a personal income tax and the Martin Commission recorded a belief in the justice and equity of taxation that would come about with the enactment of a law providing for a well considered income tax.

The suggestion that California enact such a tax law will probably meet the opposition that enactment of personal income tax laws in other states has met. This is the same opposition that has been urged against forward-looking legislation of all time; "Stop!"; "Linger and wait!"; "It is premature!"; "It is inopportune!"; and "The time is not ripe!"

I believe that the people of California will approve a personal income tax. I am certain that the enactment of a personal income tax law will provide a more equitable spread of the tax burden. Therefore, I approve Recommendation No. 6 of the Martin Commission but feel that it does not go far enough and believe that the commission should have emphatically recommended that a personal income tax law be enacted for the State of California.

Third. I am of the opinion that the Research Department recommended to be established in the State Board of Equalization should be under the coordinate control of the Governor of the State, the chairman of the Board of Equalization, the State Controller, and the Director of Finance, sitting as a governing board of such department. Such controlling board, through the various offices of its members, would have a wide source of information as to all of the needs of the State, and in its personnel would include those individuals most familiar with, where and how facts necessary to full information concerning tax matters could be obtained. Every State taxing agency would be represented on this board and the contributions of each member in directing the activities of the research department should add to its efficiency and to the value of its work.

Aside from the exceptions noted, I am in substantial accord with the report of the majority of the committee.

ISAAC JONES.

MESSAGE FROM THE GOVERNOR.

The following message from the Governor was received and read:

STATE OF CALIFORNIA, GOVERNOR'S OFFICE,

SACRAMENTO, February 3, 1931.

To the Senate of the State of California.

Senate Bill No. 204 is returned without my approval. The purpose of the introduction of this bill is to provide for bridges across navigable streams, estuaries, ponds, swamps, or arms of bay that might be outside of the line of navigable waters.

The act provides that all bridges so constructed thereunder shall be free public bridges and that no tolls shall be charged for crossing the same.

There appears to be a conflict between the existing Toll Bridge Act and Senate Bill No. 204 which may be rectified when the Legislature reconvenes, and everyone interested agrees that the bill should be corrected and they will assist in eliminating the conflict.

I attach hereto a copy of an opinion to me on the subject from the Chief Engineer, C. H. Purcell, upon which this nonapproval of the bill is founded.

JAMES ROLPH, JR., Governor.

COMMUNICATION.

STATE OF CALIFORNIA, DEPARTMENT OF PUBLIC WORKS, January 28, 1931.

Governor James Rolph, Jr., State Capitol, Sacramento, California.

MY DEAR GOVERNOR: A careful check of Senate Bill No. 204, entitled "An act to provide for bridges across navigable streams, and across estuaries, ponds, swamps, or arms of bay that may be outside of the line of navigable waters," has been made, and which has developed the following facts:

The last section of sentence 2, page 3, provides "All bridges constructed under the provisions of this act, shall be free public bridges, and no tolls shall ever be charged for crossing the same, and no such free county bridge over a navigable stream, or navigable bay, or navigable estuary or pond shall be constructed within five miles of any toll bridge over such streams, bay, estuary or pond." This matter of five miles would enable a bridge to be constructed in the vicinity of Hunters

Point, and if constructed as a free bridge would seriously affect the successful financing of the San Francisco Bay Bridge by the revenue bond method.

At a critical time when financing negotiations were under way, the starting of a free bridge movement at this point would have a serious effect and possibly would preclude the possible marketing of these securities. It is suggested that this bill be amended, increasing the permissible distance from a toll bridge, which can be accomplished immediately after the convening of the second half and passed as an emergency measure, the same as the present bill.

Accordingly, to fully protect the San Francisco Bay Bridge situation, I believe this particular bill should be vetoed and passed as amended in accordance with the above suggestion.

Yours very truly,
(Signed.)

C. H. PURCELL, State Highway Engineer.

MESSAGE FROM THE GOVERNOR.

The following message from the Governor was received and read:

STATE OF CALIFORNIA, GOVERNOR'S OFFICE,
SACRAMENTO, February 24, 1931.

*To the Honorable Members of the Senate of the State of California,
State Capitol, Sacramento, California.*

GENTLEMEN: I transmit to you a report made to me today titled "Report of Governor Rolph's Water Conservation Committee," which I trust will be pleasing in its efforts and useful in your deliberations of the State's water responsibilities.

During your recess the officials, whose names are attached to the report, with members of the Legislature held conferences with me and I commissioned the delegation to proceed to Washington in order to have their report ready for you on the opening day of your return from recess.

There are no expense bills confronting you.

With my compliments,

Very sincerely and respectfully yours,

JAMES ROLPH, JR., Governor of California.

REPORT OF GOVERNOR ROLPH'S WATER CONSERVATION COMMITTEE.

STATE OF CALIFORNIA, DEPARTMENT OF PUBLIC WORKS,
SACRAMENTO, February 24, 1931.

*Honorable James Rolph, Jr., Governor of the State of California,
State Capitol, Sacramento, California.*

MY DEAR GOVERNOR: The committee appointed by you to proceed to Washington, D. C., to confer with officials of the United States on the California State Water Plan, begs leave to submit the following report:

MEMBERSHIP OF COMMITTEE.

The personnel of the committee was:

Colonel Walter E. Garrison, Director of Public Works, Chairman.

Edward Hyatt, State Engineer.

Major A. M. Barton, Chief Engineer, State Reclamation Board.

W. B. Mathews, General Counsel, Metropolitan Water District.
State Senator B. S. Crittenden, Chairman, Legislative Water Committee.
State Assemblyman Robert P. Easley, Member, State Legislative Water Committee.
W. M. Wiley, Secretary, Kern County Water Commission.

OBJECTIVES.

The first recommendation of the California Joint Federal-State Water Resources Commission, whose report was presented in January, was that "a commission authorized to represent the State be appointed to go to Washington and endeavor to come to a definite understanding with the executive department of the federal government" on these matters.

While the main objectives of your committee were well expressed in this report, the committee also had in mind the arranging, if possible, for an inspection on the ground of the California water project by subcommittees or members of Congress next summer, and for the transmittal to Congress and making public by the Army engineers the report of the War Department on this project. Minor objectives were conferences with many federal departments relative to cooperation with the State in various matters not directly connected with the water plan, if time permitted.

Appointments with the President, the Secretary of the Interior, members of Congress and others were made before leaving California.

CONFERENCE WITH PRESIDENT HOOVER.

The committee arrived in Washington February 16th, and met with President Hoover that morning. We were very cordially received by the President and presented to him your message of greeting. After an opening statement, a brief written resume of the mission of the committee and of the California Water Plan was presented. This statement covers the entire subject and a copy is attached to this report as Exhibit A.

CONFERENCES WITH OTHER FEDERAL OFFICIALS.

During the next two days your committee called upon Dr. Ray Lyman Wilbur, Secretary of Interior; Dr. Elwood Mead, Commissioner of Reclamation; General George B. Pillsbury, Assistant Chief of Engineers, War Department; the Board of Engineers of the War Department, consisting of seven members; and officials and engineers of these and other executive departments.

Your committee also discussed the California Water Plan with Senators Johnson and Shortridge. A meeting was arranged with the California House delegation, which was attended by all California members except Congressman Clarence Lea, who was sick, at which meeting the whole plan was explained with the aid of a relief map sent to Washington for this purpose.

Your committee also called on Congressman Murphy, of Ohio, chairman of the Interior Department Subcommittee on Appropriations, relative to having his committee inspect the California water project next summer.

FINAL CONFERENCE WITH PRESIDENT HOOVER.

Before leaving Washington another meeting with the President was arranged, attended by Director of Public Works Garrison and State Engineer Hyatt, at which the progress made was explained to him. As before, we were most graciously received.

ACCOMPLISHMENTS.

The pressing water needs of California and the project to relieve present shortages with Federal-State cooperation as recommended in the joint Federal-State report were competently presented to both executive and legislative branches of the United States government. In the executive departments a clear understanding of our water problems was found and effective cooperation received. Our congressional representatives, while helpful in every way possible, seemed unadvised of the plan and took the view that California must press the plan locally and enact the necessary constitutional amendments before definite action could be had from the United States.

Senators Johnson and Shortridge assured us that they would jointly request the Senate to appoint a Senate committee to inspect the area involved during the coming summer and report its findings to the next Congress, provided, that the report of the Army engineers of the War Department is presented to Congress during the present session. The War Department has assured us that its report will be given to Congress before its adjournment March 4th.

The California House delegation passed a resolution requesting all Congressmen visiting California during next summer, to avail themselves of the opportunity of investigating the California Water Conservation Plan. Congressman Murphy assured us that he and his subcommittee would visit California during the summer of 1931 and would devote at least four days to the inspection of this project. Dr. Wilbur, Secretary of the Interior, stated that he would accompany this committee during a part of that time. Dr. Elwood Mead, Commissioner of Reclamation, also signified his intention of accompanying this committee during its inspection of the project.

It is desired particularly to point out the importance of the report of the War Department and the progress made in expediting its transmittal to Congress. As soon as this report reaches Congress it is not only publicly available, but is officially before the Congress for action. Due to the telegrams sent by yourself, the assistance of our Senators and Congressman, and by the appearance of this Committee before the Assistant Chief Engineer and the Board of Engineers, we believe that this report will reach Congress and the California Legislature promptly and afford material basis for action by the Legislature during its second session.

CONCLUSIONS.

Your committee believes that the recommendations of the Federal-State Commission have been carried out as far as possible at this time. With the information and assurances received by your committee from the executive and legislative departments of the United States the way is open for the State of California, through its Legislature, to proceed further by preparing and submitting to the vote of the people of the State the constitutional amendments necessary before the State can act.

In arranging for inspection of the project by congressional committees and members and by expediting the War Department report, much has been accomplished. The executive departments are well informed and are sympathetic to federal cooperation on the California Water Plan. Congress, on the other hand, is not informed and much educational work will be necessary. Close and continuous cooperation between the State and federal departments, both executive and legislative, will be necessary to put the plan into execution.

RECOMMENDATIONS.

1. Immediate action by the California Legislature as recommended in the Federal-State report, in putting before the people of California the three constitutional amendments necessary for the execution of the plan. Details of these amendments are given on page 15 of the Federal-State report.

2. The informing of Congress of the water problems of California and the proposed plan by congressional inspection trips, by furnishing to it data and information, and in all other ways possible.

3. Close and continuous contact with all federal agencies interested.

OTHER ACCOMPLISHMENTS OF TRIP.

While in Washington it was possible to take up with various federal departments many other matters of interest to California, particularly those affecting the Department of Public Works and the Reclamation Board. Conferences were held with officials of the Federal Power Commission; U. S. Geological Survey, both water resources and topographic branches; National Forest Service; Department of Agriculture; and War Department.

Arrangements were made whereby a $5,000 additional federal allowance will be made available during the present year for stream gaging in California, and a commitment secured for an allowance of $100,000 for topographic mapping in California during the next biennium, contingent on being matched by the State, as compared to $35,000 formerly obtained. Other important decisions, impossible of determination by correspondence, were also arrived at. In view of the multiplicity of cooperative interests of the State and the United States along these lines, and the availability of federal assistance, it is also recommended that much closer contact between State and federal departments on these matters be maintained in the future than has been had in the past.

Accompanying this report are three appendices as follows:

Appendix A—Statement to President Hoover, February 16, 1931.

Appendix B—Report of California Joint Federal-State Water Resources Commission.

Appendix C—Small map of California Water Plan.

Respectfully submitted.

WALTER E. GARRISON,

Enc. 3.

Director of Public Works, Chairman of Committee.

To the President of the United States.

Subject: California Water Resources Commission.

Members of the Commission:

Colonel Walter E. Garrison, Director of Public Works, Chairman.

Edward Hyatt, State Engineer.

Major A. M. Barton, Chief Engineer, State Reclamation Board.

W. B. Mathews, General Counsel, Metropolitan Water District.

State Senator B. S. Crittenden, Chairman, Legislative Water Committee.

State Assemblyman R. P. Easley, Member Legislative Water Committee.

W. M. Wiley, Secretary, Kern County Water Commission.

MR. PRESIDENT: This Commission is here to ask your advice and help concerning a program of California water development, and as to how the United States can be interested in this subject, which we think is of national importance.

Mr. President, I know that there are few, if any, men who personally know more about the California water situation than yourself, and, therefore, the engineering presentation need take but little of your time. We have heard and read your past public expressions regarding such great water storage projects as are proposed in California.

The California water plan has passed the visionary stage and is now definitely up for decision, and a very potent factor in such progress has been your own interest and help in initiating the California Joint Federal-State Water Resources Commission and appointing thereon able and qualified representatives of the federal departments concerned.

This Commission's report was made to you and to the Governor of California early in January, and the first recommendation of the report was as follows:

First, that a commission authorized to represent the State be appointed to go to Washington and endeavor to come to a definite understanding with the executive department of the federal government as to the terms upon which it will recommend to Congress that federal aid be extended, and also endeavor to arrange for the introduction in Congress of bills in conformity with such understanding. The importance of this can not be overemphasized. There is reason to believe that there is in process of formulation a new policy with respect to the federal relationship to the states as to water development. A federal commission is now studying this very question. Here there is a project most carefully investigated both by State and federal agencies which should go ahead and to which any new policy to be adopted may well be related.

I may say, Mr. President, that Governor Rolph is keenly aware of the importance of water problems in California and in his inaugural address in January said that he stood ready as Governor to do everything in his power toward finding a practical solution of these pressing problems. Therefore, Mr. President, this delegation representing the whole State of California is here at the direction of Governor Rolph to follow up the report of the Federal-State Commission and to attempt to obtain information which will permit the California Legislature, which will meet again this month, to take the necessary forward steps.

As you well know, Mr. President, the main water problem in California is water shortage, shortage during summer and fall in many places and all year in others. The second problem is flood control. There is enough water to fill all requirements and what is needed and what must be had is regulation and distribution. The character of water problems differs somewhat in different sections, but all parts of the State have such problems.

The California water plan as recommended by the Federal-State Commission is essentially a relief project. It does not propose irrigation of new lands, with consequent increase of the overproduction situation, but is limited to the relief of developed areas, facing retrogression or abandonment, unless help can be obtained. Relief is possible, but only with the assistance of both the State and the United States.

The most pressing urgency in which the aid of the Federal Government is believed justified and necessary is that in the southern San Joaquin Valley. Here the stream flow is small and irrigation from wells has badly overdrawn or exhausted the underground water supplies. In this area about 400,000 acres now under irrigation of a high type and supporting a large population are seriously short of water, and it is estimated in the Federal-State report that unless new water can be brought in 200,000 acres of highly developed land worth $50,000,000 and producing crops of an annual value of more than $20,000,000 must largely go back to desert conditions. The Commission finds the Sacramento-San Joaquin relief project economically sound and goes on to state:

"The Commission reached this conclusion without giving weight to the sentimental consideration that relief is essential if a large, highly developed and heretofore prosperous section is to be preserved. But that consideration is entitled to weight. Putting aside the loss of labor and capital already invested, it is not possible for these sections to go back in a large part to their original desert condition without a great toll of human misery and suffering. This misery and suffering will just as surely be present as if the calamity were one of earthquake or flood, and the occasion is as truly one which justly calls for governmental assistance if the communities themselves can not bear the burden alone. In this case we believe they can bear the burden, if this burden is thrown on all the portion of the State benefited and not entirely on the lands directly assisted. Even if this were not so, our recommendation would still be that the project was one worthy of State and Federal aid."

In Tulare County, about the center of this distressed area, some 10,000 acres have already been abandoned and assessed valuations are decreasing.

We believe, Mr. President, that a project of this kind, economically sound, involving no material increase in production, but rescuing 400,000 acres of valuable irrigated land from depreciation or destruction, should be of more interest to the United States than an entirely new land project.

New water can best be brought into the southern San Joaquin Valley by means of the storage of an equivalent amount in the Sacramento watershed. This brings us to new areas of distress with different problems.

While the Sacramento drainage produces more water than the Colorado and far more than the ultimate needs of its own basin, in its present unregulated condition the summer flow has dropped so low that salt water from Suisun Bay has worked up the channels of the Sacramento-San Joaquin delta. This condition has resulted in curtailing irrigation to some extent and in endangering the whole delta section of over 300,000 acres of extremely fertile lands which produce crops valued annually at $30,000,000, as well as creating a fresh water shortage in the industrial section along Suisun Bay. This situation has been brought about by several causes, chiefly upstream diversion for irrigation. For the same reason navigation has been badly impaired in the upper Sacramento River and more so in the San Joaquin River above the delta. At the same time flood control is a necessity in the Sacramento Valley and there is an existing project under way at this time to cost $51,000,000 in which the United States, the State, and local interests each pay one-third.

The government of the United States is, we feel, directly concerned in the solution of the pressing water problems of these areas, particularly because of its interest in navigation, flood control, reclamation and the rescue of existing developments from threatened destruction.

For ten years past the State has studied these water problems in great detail, and a general Sacramento-San Joaquin Valley plan to best overcome them has been presented. This plan has been reviewed by the best engineers of California, and by the engineers of the War Department and the Reclamation Bureau, and there is substantial agreement as to its being the best solution.

Large storage on the Sacramento River at Kennett near the head of the valley would be provided. The stored water when released would flow down the river to the delta and be available for transmission into the San Joaquin Valley. Storage would be necessary on the San Joaquin River at Friant, 30 miles north of Fresno, from which point a high line canal would be taken south 157 miles to the Kern River.

This plan, if executed, would solve all of the problems mentioned and has other advantages. It would materially assist navigation and flood control on both rivers, would eliminate the salinity trouble and would rescue and relieve the southern San Joaquin Valley from the destructive effect of water shortage.

This project is estimated to cost about $160,000,000 total. The construction of certain items essential to the program costing approximately $20,000,000 can possibly be safely deferred some years; however, the entire program should be authorized at one time.

Revenues from sale of water are calculated on the basis of the reasonable ability of the lands to pay and from sale of power at competitive prices. While these revenues are large they are not sufficient to meet the total annual costs, and the Federal-State Commission concluded that the project could not be undertaken without State and Federal aid.

Basing computations on an interest rate not to exceed 3½ per cent the project was found economically sound if all benefits direct and indirect were taken into consideration. The Commission then stated:

"It is manifest that the Federal government alone can obtain money at 3½ per cent interest. It may well be that it can obtain or be willing to advance the money at a less rate of interest. It may also be that the Federal government will be willing to advance funds for construction of certain portions of the project without interest."

The Commission recommended that the project be financed and built by the United States and operated by the State as far as practicable, the State of California to guarantee the United States payment of interest and principal as due, less such amount as the United States would contribute on account of flood control and navigation. The difference between the annual costs and the revenues would be taken care of within the State.

The conclusions of the State reports are now completed. Reports are under way by the War Department and Bureau of Reclamation which we understand will be available shortly.

Mr. President, we are seeking your counsel and advice on all phases of this subject. Advice at this time will be particularly valuable since the California Legislature reconvenes late this month, will adjourn in April, and will not meet again until 1933. Without better information relative to the participation of the United States in this project than is now available it is doubtful if much can be accomplished in the 1931 Legislature.

We have available detailed information and would be happy indeed to explain any items further.

Washington, D. C., February 16, 1931.

MESSAGE FROM THE GOVERNOR.

The following message from the Governor was received and read:

GOVERNOR'S OFFICE,
SACRAMENTO, February 24, 1931.

To the Honorable, The Senate of the State of California, State Capitol.

PROGRESS REPORT OF EXTENT TO WHICH STATE HIGHWAY AND STATE INSTITUTIONAL BUILDING PROGRAM HAS BEEN ADVANCED.

In accordance with my request to the Department of Public Works, that all public works be speeded up as a measure of affording a larger measure of employment to labor and a larger market to business, very substantial progress has been made in making these policies immediately effective. This is true both in construction and maintenance operations of the Division of Highways, and in the building activities of the Division of Architecture.

Generally speaking the State highway situation may be summarized as follows: State highway projects financed from the July 1, 1931-June 30, 1933, budget have been advanced as follows:

4 contracts awarded, total.....	$ 491,200
3 projects now advertised for bids, total.....	1,011,500
32 projects to be advertised for bids April 1st, total.....	4,976,000

Grand total of advanced highway construction program.....$6,478,700

In addition to the construction, the specific State highway maintenance program has been advanced as fast as seasonal conditions permit. This specific maintenance program includes such work as spraying roadside vegetation; dust oiling; contract and day labor work for furnishing rock for base reinforcement and oil surfacing.

The cost of this work, which will be well under way by April 1st, will approximate $577,500.

By May 1st a program of specific shoulder improvement on sections of highway in Imperial and Riverside counties will be started, expenditures upon which will approximate $256,000.

It should be noted that this specific maintenance program is in addition to routine maintenance work and upkeep upon the State highways, which totals nearly $300,000 per month.

Special unemployment relief work upon the State highway system is affording employment to 3056 men. Of this number 1200 men are employed in the five unemployment relief labor camps; 175 men are employed on the special relief projects out of Monterey, the men living in Monterey; 1681 men are employed on the special relief maintenance crews. These latter men work on the basis of three days a week.

It is of interest to note that a careful check made on the men employed on the Monterey project showed an average of four dependents to each man employed.

Detailed information as to the construction and specific maintenance program is attached to this report.

The State institutional building program also has been advanced in a most gratifying manner. I feel that the detailed progress reports attached hereto fully justifies the action of the Legislature in acceding to the request made by me during the first half of the legislative session that the State institutional building bills be passed in emergency preference order.

The following summary gives the status of building construction projects handled since January 5, 1931, by the Division of Architecture, Department of Public Works:

1. Total work put under way in field.....	$ 973,185
2. Total work pending contracts being executed.....	307,000
3. Total work now being advertised for bids.....	294,000
4. Total work drawings under way.....	2,464,000
5. Total work awaiting securing of sites or information.....	1,424,000
6. Two projects awaiting appointment of architects in private practice	50,000

Total value of projects.....$5,512,185

MECCA-BLYTHE TOLL BRIDGE ACQUISITION.

Upon my instructions, the Department of Public Works has thoroughly investigated the stability, the suitability, and the value of the Blythe toll bridge. Engineers of both states and the bridge company participated in this investigation, which has just been completed. A full report of the findings of this investigation will soon be ready for submission.

The importance of this structure as a part of the interstate highway system of California and Arizona was such that I felt it my duty to personally contact the governor of Arizona and other officials of that state regarding this bridge. I found their attitude in this matter to be extremely cordial and agreeable. The state of Arizona is willing to cooperate with California to the fullest extent. Officials of that state expressed their willingness to participate to the amount of 50 per cent of a fair and just cost; the cost to be determined by joint action of the highway department engineers of the respective states and the bridge company.

The bridge company officials on their part have expressed their willingness to sell the bridge at a fair price. By agreement with Arizona officials, Colonel Garrison, Director of the Department of Public Works, and State Highway Engineer C. H. Purcell, have entered into negotiations with the bridge officials.

In connection with the bridge, it will be necessary to add to the State highway system a piece of now existing county road adjacent to the bridge, and about four miles long.

The reports and proposed methods of purchase will be completed in ample time for the Legislature to take action during the present session.

The acquisition of the bridge by California and Arizona will eliminate the present unhappy situation in which travelers from the East find themselves compelled to pay a toll at their first entrance into California.

In order that a complete picture may be shown, I might further state that this bridge crosses the Colorado River at a point near Blythe. The desirability of making it a free structure to travel can be seen in the fact that it forms a direct interstate connection between Route 64 (Mecca to Blythe State highway) in California and the Wickenburg-Ehrenburg road in Arizona. It forms an important gateway into California for transcontinental traffic through Phoenix from the East.

The states of California and Arizona contemplate, in their present budgets, to spend large sums of money on the roads leading to this bridge. The state of Arizona proposes to relocate a large part of the present road between Phoenix and the Colorado River. In so doing, it will transform the present desert road into a high speed, well aligned highway. Likewise, California is relocating its Route 64 in many places and transforming this important road into a high speed highway. The budget for the 1931-1933 biennium carries an appropriation of $300,000 for this road. It is certain this route is destined to become one of the most important and heavily traveled roads leading into southern California and Los Angeles from the East, and that traffic over this route will be increased to many times its present travel.

SPECIFIC MAINTENANCE PROJECTS.

In addition to the routine maintenance work of upkeep to the State highways which totals nearly $300,000 each month, the Maintenance Department is making every effort to advance the specific program as fast as the seasonal conditions of the road will permit.

The spraying of roadside vegetation is already under way in some sections and will be well completed during March. This work will cover some 1150 miles and represents an expenditure of $80,000.

Specifications are being prepared covering the dust oiling work, which is one of the important seasonal programs from a motorist's point of view. This type of work is programmed for 1040 miles of roadway and 330 miles of shoulders at an expenditure in excess of $300,000. The greater part of this work should be advertised and under way the latter part of April, although road and weather conditions must always be considered in this work.

Preliminary reports are prepared and specifications under way for contract and day labor work for furnishing rock for base reinforcement and oil surfacing. The base reinforcement, etc., is estimated to cost $225,000 and the armor coat and oil processing work about $160,000. Approximately one-half of the rock will be produced under contract, and work will be under way as soon as contracts can be let, which should be by the middle of April. The balance of the rock will be purchased from commercial plants and hauled with rented or State-owned equipment. The oil work will follow the production of the rock, and is planned to start by May 15th. In addition to this work plans are under way for shoulder improvement in Imperial and Riverside counties totaling $256,000. This work should start about May 1st.

Bill read second time, and ordered on file for third reading.

URGENCY CLAUSE.

SEC. 2. This act is hereby declared to be an urgency measure, deemed necessary for the immediate preservation of the public peace, health and safety, within the meaning of section 1 of article IV of the constitution of the State of California, and as such it shall take effect immediately.

The following is a statement of the fact constituting such necessity:

Various cities of the class affected by this amendment, will hold elections to which such amendment applies in April of this year. Inasmuch as the amendment would not take effect in the ordinary course of procedure until after such elections, the act as it existed prior to the adoption of the amendment would apply.

As a consequence cities of the fifth class in which elections would be held this year would be governed for two years at least, by officers elected under a law which did not longer exist in the same form. Other cities of the same class holding elections at a later date would come under the provisions of the act as amended. There would thus be a situation in which cities of the same class would be governed under different laws.

In order to prevent the resulting confusion throughout the State, and the injustice which would require certain cities of the class affected to be governed by officers whose election was no longer provided for by the laws of this State, it is necessary that this amendment be passed by this Legislature to take effect immediately.

Urgency clause read.

The question being on the adoption of the urgency clause.

The roll was called, and the urgency clause adopted by the following vote:

A bank which locates or commences to do business within the limits of this state, and a corporation which commences to do business in this state, after the effective date of this act, shall thereupon prepay the minimum tax hereunder, and upon the filing of its return within two months and fifteen days after the close of its taxable year its tax for that year shall be adjusted upon the basis of the net income received during that taxable year. Any bank or corporation which is dissolved and any foreign corporation which withdraws from the state during any year shall pay a tax hereunder only for the months of its fiscal year which precede such dissolution or withdrawal, according to or measured by such proportionate part of the net income of the preceding taxable year as the number of months of the year prior to such dissolution or withdrawal bears to the entire preceding taxable year. In any event, each such corporation shall pay a minimum tax of twenty-five dollars for such period.

If any bank or corporation discontinues actual operations within the state in any year and thereafter has no net income but does not dissolve or withdraw from the state, it shall in the succeeding year and thereafter until dissolution, withdrawal or resumption of operations, pay an annual tax to the state of twenty-five dollars.

"3456. (a) If such reclamation district is located, in whole or in part, within the Sacramento and San Joaquin drainage district, then if and when the said reclamation board shall have approved the plan or plans of the works of reclamation, after a hearing as provided in section 3455 of this code, then the board of trustees of the reclamation district shall so report to the board of supervisors of the county within which the district or the greater part thereof is situate, and shall set forth in their said report the estimated cost of the said works of reclamation, and petition the said board of supervisors to appoint three commissioners who shall have no interest in any real estate within said district, each of whom, before entering upon his duties, shall make and subscribe an oath that he is not in any manner interested in any real estate within said district, directly or indirectly, and that he will perform the duties of a commissioner to the best of his ability. Upon receipt of said petition from the board of trustees the board of supervisors to whom the same was presented must within not more than sixty days appoint said assessment commissioners above referred to. Said commissioners must view and assess upon the land within said district the said sum so estimated and shall apportion the same according to the benefits that will accrue to each tract of land in said district, respectively, by reason of the expenditures of said sums of money, and shall estimate the same in gold coin of the United States. The sums must be collected and paid into the county treasury as hereinafter provided, and be placed by the treasurer to the credit of the district, and paid out for the works of reclamation upon the warrants of the trustees, approved by the board of supervisors, or, if bonds of such district have been issued upon said assessment, then said treasurer shall set the same apart as a separate fund for the purpose of paying the principal and interest of such bonds, and shall not pay any part of the moneys received from such assessment for any purpose other than the payment of the principal and interest of such bonds.

(b) In all cases when the work contemplated by the original or any supplemental plan of reclamation of any reclamation district shall have been completed, the trustees may so report to the board of supervisors of the county in which the district, or the greater part thereof is situate, together with a petition to the said board of supervisors to appoint assessment commissioners. Said report and petition shall set forth that the work contemplated by the original or supplemental plan of reclamation has been completed, and that hereafter the said reclamation district will only require funds for the maintenance and repair of the said works of reclamation. Upon filing said report and petition the said board of supervisors shall appoint three commissioners, each of whom shall be similarly qualified, and shall make and subscribe the same oath as is provided hereinabove for commissioners. When so appointed and so qualified such commissioners shall prepare an assessment list, which list shall contain the following information in separate columns:

1. A description of each tract assessed by legal subdivisions, swamp land surveys, or other boundaries sufficient to identify the same.
2. The number of acres in each tract.

3. The names of the owners of each tract, if known; and if unknown, that fact; but no mistake or error in the name of the owner or supposed owner of the property assessed, and no mistake in any other particular, shall render the assessment thereof invalid.

4. The assessment valuation per acre of each tract assessed.

5. The total assessment valuations of each said tract.

6. A blank column for rate to be fixed as shown hereinafter.

7. A blank column for amount of assessment to be computed as shown hereinafter.

Thereafter said assessment valuations shall be used as a basis for assessments in raising funds for the maintenance and repair of the works of reclamation and incidental expenses of said district. Said assessment list, when completed, shall be filed with the clerk of the board of supervisors in the same manner as a report made under an original or modified plan of reclamation. Thereupon the said board of supervisors shall appoint a time when it will meet for the purpose of hearing objections; said objections, if any, must be in writing, verified, and filed with the clerk of said board of supervisors. Notice of the said hearing shall be given in the same manner and for the same time as notice of hearing objections to an original assessment. At said hearing, the board of supervisors shall hear such evidence as may be offered in support of said written objections, and may modify or amend the said assessment valuations in any particular. No objections to said assessment valuations shall be considered by the board of supervisors, or allowed in any other action or proceeding, unless said objections shall have been made in writing to the board of supervisors within thirty days after the first publication of notice of hearing objections, if any, to said assessment valuations.

Any person aggrieved by the decision of the board of supervisors may commence an action in the superior court of the county in which the greater part of the said district is situate, to have said assessment valuations corrected, modified or annulled. Such action must be commenced within thirty days after said assessment valuations have been approved by the board of supervisors. If said action shall not be commenced within thirty days, no action of defense shall thereafter be maintained attacking the legality of said assessment valuations in any respect.

Thereafter, whenever, in the opinion of the trustees of the district, it shall be necessary to raise any sum for the construction, maintenance or repair of the works of reclamation, or for the incidental expenses of the district, the said board of trustees shall make an order, which order shall be entered in the minutes of the board and shall recite the total amount necessary to be raised and shall fix a rate designating the number of cents to be levied on each one hundred dollars of assessment valuation shown on the list prepared and approved in the manner hereinabove provided.

Thereafter the board of trustees must complete said assessment list by inserting the rate and the total assessment in columns six and seven as provided therefor.

The assessment made in pursuance hereof shall be filed with the county treasurer and thereafter collected in the same manner provided for the collection of any original assessment: provided, however, that the board of trustees may, in their discretion, direct the payment of any such assessment in one installment.

The report of assessment commissioners as herein provided, fixing the assessment valuations for reclamation purposes, after having first been approved by the board of supervisors as hereinabove provided, shall continue in force as the basis for raising necessary funds for construction, maintenance and repair of the works of reclamation, and for incidental expenses of the district until the trustees of said district, or the holders of title or evidence of title representing fifteen per cent or more of the lands within the district, shall petition said board of supervisors to make an order directing the commissioners who made the original assessment list or other commissioners, to be named in such order to prepare a new assessment list. Such commissioners must have the same qualifications and take the same oath as the original assessment commissioners.

The assessment list when so prepared by said commissioners shall be filed with the clerk of the board of supervisors, and shall thereafter in all respects be subject to the same provisions as an original assessment list. All provisions of this code relating to collection of unbonded assessments and sale of land for delinquent assessments, and for sale, leasing and other disposition of land as in section 3466a of this code provided, shall be applicable to assessments levied in accordance with the provisions of this section."

When any tract of land upon which an assessment or assessments shall have been made shall be subdivided into smaller parcels, the board of trustees of the district shall reapportion the assessment or assessments upon such tract, including assessments or portion thereof which have become delinquent together with the delinquencies thereon, in such manner as will charge each of said smaller parcels with a just proportion of assessment or assessments previously made upon said tract so subdivided and with a just proportion of said delinquencies. Assessments and delinquencies thereon on tracts of land which have become delinquent and which have been sold for delinquency pursuant to the provisions of section 3466 or section 3480 of this code, and which have been subdivided, shall be reapportioned in the same manner and with the same effect as if such tract had not been so sold. As a condition to the making of any reapportionment as in this section provided the board of trustees shall require that each parcel of such subdivided tract be given suitable means of ingress and egress. Said board of trustees shall file with the clerk of the board of supervisors of the county a list or lists of the charges assessed against each of said parcels. Said reapportionment shall be approved by the board of supervisors in the manner provided in section 3462 of this code. Said lists after such approval shall be filed with the county treasurer of the county and shall have the same effect as on original assessment.

SEC. 3. Section 3462 of the Political Code is hereby amended to read as follows:

3462. Said lists, when completed, shall be filed with the clerk of the board of supervisors of the county. The board of supervisors shall appoint a time when it will meet for the purpose of hearing objections to said assessment, and notice of such hearing shall be given by publication for two weeks in some newspaper of general circulation published in said county.

At any time before the date of such hearing, any person interested in any land upon which any charge has been assessed may file written objections to such assessment, stating the grounds of such objections, which said statement shall be verified by the affidavit of such person, or some other person who is familiar with the facts. At said hearing the board of supervisors shall hear such evidence as may be offered in support of said written objection and may modify or amend the said assessment in any particular, or make a reapportionment of the entire assessment. If the amount of any assessment in said list shall be changed, the board of supervisors shall set a day for hearing objections to said assessment as changed, and shall give notice thereof by publication for two weeks in some newspaper published in the county. At such hearing objections in writing may be made by any person interested, and the board of supervisors shall proceed to hear the same in the same manner as upon the original hearing. If the amount of any assessment shall again be changed the board of supervisors shall proceed as before to give notice and to hear objections thereto, and shall proceed in a similar manner until the amount of each assessment shall be finally fixed and approved. The board of supervisors shall then make an order approving said assessment, and shall indorse such order upon said assessment list, which said indorsement shall be signed by the chairman of said board of supervisors and attested by the clerk thereof, and such decision of said board of supervisors shall be final, and thereafter said assessment list shall be conclusive evidence that the said assessment has been made and levied according to law, except in an action commenced as hereinafter provided. The lists shall be prepared in duplicate, one original thereof being retained in the office of the district, and the second original thereof shall then be filed with the county treasurer, or, if the district is situated in more than one county, then the said second original list must be filed in the county where the greater portion of the lands of said district is situated (designated as the main county), and copies thereof certified by the treasurer must be filed with the treasurer of each of the other counties.

No objection to such assessment shall be considered by the board of supervisors, or allowed in any other action or proceeding, unless such objection shall have been made in writing to the board of supervisors as above specified.

Any person aggrieved by the decision of the board of supervisors may commence an action in the superior court of the county in which the greater part of said district is situated to have said assessment corrected, modified or annulled. Such action must be commenced within thirty days after said assessment list has been filed in the office of the county treasurer. If said action shall not be commenced within thirty days, no action or defense shall thereafter be maintained attacking the legality of said assessment in any respect.

The provisions of this section shall apply in all respects to an assessment list made under the provisions of subdivision b of section 3456."

3480 of this code, the county treasurer of the main county, when and as directed by the board of trustees of the district, may then sell any land remaining unsold, to the highest bidder for cash at the front door of the courthouse of the main county of the district after giving previous notice of such sale, and the time and place of holding the same, by publication thereof in some newspaper published in the county in which the land to be sold or some portion thereof is situated for two times, to wit: once a week for two successive weeks. It shall be sufficient to describe said land in said notice by reference number as set forth in the assessment lists to which reference shall be made in said notice, and to the date and time of filing same, for further particulars. The trustees of the district shall have the right to reject any and all bids and no bid shall be accepted for an amount less than such price as shall be approved by them. One or more parcels of such land may be included in the same notice and sold severally at the time and place set forth in said notice. Upon such last mentioned sale being made as herein provided, the said county treasurer shall execute a deed to the purchaser conveying the land sold, upon payment of the price bid, which deed shall have the effect of conveying title to the land sold to the purchaser free of encumbrance, except district assessments (including the unpaid balance of said assessment for the delinquency of which said property was sold) which upon the date of the sale herein provided had not been called, and except as may be otherwise provided by law, and such deed duly executed and acknowledged shall be prima facie evidence that all the proceedings for the levy and collection of the delinquent assessment for which said land was sold, and all of the proceedings for the sale of said land have been duly and regularly taken, and all notices required to be given or published have been so duly given and published for the time and manner as required by law.

Where any land has been sold for a delinquent assessment, pursuant to the provisions of section 3466, 3480 or 3480a of the Political Code for a delinquent assessment or installment of the same and no redemption has been made and the time for redemption has expired, the district shall have the right to the possession of the land so sold and unredeemed and the board of trustees shall have the right to bring and maintain any and all actions in equity or law in connection with said land and the protection of the district's rights therein to the same extent as any other owner; and the costs and expenses of such action or actions shall be a charge against the district. The board of trustees shall also have the right to expend funds of the district in such amounts that may from time to time be necessary for the purpose of retiring any and all liens against such land superior to the title of the county treasurer therein. The trustees of the district shall have the management and control of, and right to lease out to a tenant or tenants for such reasonable rental and upon such terms as such trustees may deem advisable, any and all lands in the district which have been sold to the county treasurer, as trustee, for delinquent assessments, where the time for redemption has expired and said lands remain unsold and to receive and collect the rental for the same. All rentals collected or moneys received by the trustees of the district from such lease of land or for the use or occupation of such land may be applied by them to the payment of the incidental expenses of holding and leasing said lands and to the payment of any other incidental expenses of, or legal charge against the district: provided, however, that all rentals collected or moneys received from lease of land sold to the county treasurer as trustee of the district pursuant to the provisions of section 3480 of this code or for the use or occupation of such land, less the incidental expenses of leasing or holding the same, shall, in the event said district shall be in default for interest or principal payments on any of said bonds issued by said district, be deposited in said county treasury of the main county, to the credit of the bond fund of the district. The provisions hereof shall apply to all lands heretofore sold for delinquency to a district or to the county treasurer, as trustee for the district, as well as to future sales under assessments whether heretofore, or hereafter to be, levied."

MESSAGE FROM THE GOVERNOR.

The following message from the Governor was received and read:

STATE OF CALIFORNIA, GOVERNOR'S OFFICE,
SACRAMENTO, March 3, 1931.

To the Senate of the State of California.

I am returning herewith Senate Bill No. 489, without my approval, for the reason that it will effect the salaries of a number of county officers without having been given an opportunity of introducing amendments to county government bills to coincide with the classification, and further that the act is doubtless contrary to section 1, article IV, State constitution, which provides that no measure changing the salary of any officer shall be construed to be an urgency measure.

The purpose of the bill is the amending of sections 4005c and 4006 of the Political Code in order to reclassify the counties according to the 1930 federal census.

It is doubtful whether there is need of such an urgency clause, and everyone interested, including the author, Senator Wagy, agrees that this clause should be eliminated for the best interests of all concerned.

I am, therefore, returning the bill without my approval but without prejudice.

Respectfully submitted,

JAMES ROLPH, JR., Governor.

SUSTAINING GOVERNOR'S VETO.

"Sec. 5.04. Cash fund for investment certificates. If, in the case of any association issuing investment certificates, other than definite term investment certificates, the cash fund thereof, as defined in this section, shall be less than the following percentage of the sum of the investment certificate liabilities thereof, excluding liabilities on its definite term investment certificates:

(1) Three per cent of such sum if such sum is not more than one million dollars;
(2) Four per cent of such sum if such sum is more than one million dollars but not more than three million dollars;

(3) Five per cent of such sum if such sum is more than three million dollars: then such association shall not make or purchase any loans or investments until such percentage shall have been restored, excepting (a) pursuant to its obligations to do so theretofore incurred; (b) loans on investment certificates; and (c) investments in readily marketable bonds or other securities referred to in subdivisions

(3), (4), (5) and (6) of section 9.02 of this act. The cash fund provided in this section shall consist of cash on hand and in banks and, to the extent of not more than fifty per cent of such fund, in readily marketable bonds or other securities referred to in subdivisions (3), (4), (5) and (6) of section 9.02 of this act taken at the unpaid principal amount or market value thereof, whichever is less, and shall be computed after deducting from the aggregate of such cash, bonds and securities all borrowings of such associations except through the issuance of investment certificates. Whenever any association's cash fund, as defined in this section, shall become less than the percentage prescribed by this section, such association shall, within twenty-four hours thereafter, mail to the commissioner a statement of such fact; and if the commissioner shall so require, such association shall thereafter, until such percentage shall have been restored, mail to the commissioner daily or otherwise as the commissioner may direct a statement of the matters prescribed in section 6.04 of this act."

All investment certificates hereafter issued shall expressly state the limitation upon the holder's right to interest, as provided by this section in respect of such certificates. If a part only of the sum evidenced by an investment certificate is withdrawn, the sum withdrawn shall be deemed to be that first received by the association. No association shall make any contract with any of its certificate holders waiving in any manner the provisions of this section, and if any such contract shall be so made, such contract shall be void."

Amendment adopted.

AMENDMENT NUMBER ONE HUNDRED TEN.

On page 14, of the printed bill, strike out all of lines 13 to 46, inclusive, and insert in lieu thereof the following:

"Sec. 5.06. Redemption of certificates. All investment certificates hereafter issued shall be subject to redemption, either in whole or in part, at the option of the association at any time after the issuance thereof, by giving the holder at least thirty days' notice of such intended redemption; provided, however, that an association may provide that such certificates shall not be subject to redemption for an initial period after the issuance thereof, which initial period in the case of definite term investment certificates shall not exceed two years and in the case of all other investment certificates shall not exceed six months. All investment certificates hereafter issued shall expressly state that such certificates are subject to redemption, and the period of notice which shall be required for redemption, and if there be an initial period in which the certificate may not be redeemed, shall also state such fact and the length of such initial period. The redemption price of all investment certificates shall be the value thereof at the date fixed for redemption; provided, however, that in the case of definite term investment certificates, such redemption price, if so provided in such certificates, shall include a premium of not to exceed one per cent of the principal amount thereof. On or after the date fixed for redemption as stated in the notice of redemption, each holder of an investment certificate called for redemption shall surrender his certificate properly indorsed to the association and shall thereupon be entitled to receive payment of the redemption price of such certificate, or of the portion thereof to be redeemed; and in case a certificate shall be redeemed in part, to receive a new certificate representing the unredeemed part thereof. If such notice of intended redemption shall have been duly given and if on or before the date fixed for such redemption funds necessary for such redemption shall be and continue available therefor, then, notwithstanding that any certificate called for redemption in whole or in part shall not have been surrendered, the interest thereon with respect to the amount called for redemption shall cease to accrue after the date fixed for such redemption, and all rights of the holder in respect of the amount so called for redemption shall forthwith after such redemption date cease and determine, except only the right of the holder to receive the redemption price without interest after the date fixed for redemption. In all cases the notice of redemption shall expressly state that interest will cease on the date fixed for redemption."

Amendment adopted.

AMENDMENT NUMBER ONE HUNDRED ELEVEN.

On page 14 of the printed bill, strike out all of lines 47 to 52, inclusive, and on page 15 of the printed bill, strike out all of lines 1 to 17, inclusive, and insert in lieu thereof the following:

"Sec. 5.07. Modification of certificates. If so stated in any investment certificate hereafter issued and subject to the conditions stated in this section and such additional conditions, if any, as may be stated in such certificate, any such certificate shall be subject to modification at the option of the association as to the rate of interest payable thereon, but not otherwise, at any time after such initial period as may be provided in such certificate (which initial period in the case of definite term investment certificates shall be at least two years, and in the case of all other investment certificates shall be at least six months) by giving the holder thereof ninety days' notice of such modification, and by mailing notice thereof to the commissioner; provided, that if any holder of any such certificate within said ninety-day period shall demand the redemption price of his certificate and shall tender such certificate properly indorsed for surrender upon payment of such redemption price, then such proposed modification shall not take effect unless such payment shall be available for such certificate holder on or before the expiration of said ninety-day period. If such demand and tender shall be made and such payment shall not be made or made available, then such certificate holder shall be entitled, subject to section 6.02 of this act, upon tendering his certificate properly indorsed for surrender within fifteen days after said ninety-day period, to receive the redemption price of the certificate surrendered. For the purpose of this section, the redemption price of a certificate shall include accrued interest to the date of the payment thereof."

Amendment adopted.

AMENDMENT NUMBER ONE HUNDRED TWELVE.

On page 15 of the printed bill, beginning with line 20, strike out all of the printed matter down to and including the period on page 18, line 33, and insert in lieu thereof the following:

"Sec. 6.01. Notice of intention to withdraw. Each association must prescribe by its by-laws, or by contract with its shareholders or certificate holders, or by both, the period of notice of intention to withdraw which such association at its option may require, which period shall not be less than thirty days nor more than six months. All certificates hereafter issued evidencing shares or investment certificates shall state the period of such notice and shall also state that the right of the holder thereof to withdraw funds evidenced thereby is subject to the provisions of article six of this act. Each association may prescribe by its by-laws, or by contract with its shareholders or certificate holders, or both, the terms and conditions of withdrawal, provided, such terms and conditions shall not be contrary to the provisions of this act.

Any notice of intention to withdraw shall be invalid unless it is given in writing to the office of the association at which the shares or investment certificates in question were issued, or at which the account of such association as to such shares or investment certificates is kept, or to the principal office of such association, signed by a holder entitled to make a withdrawal, or by his attorney or agent, and unless it contains a statement of an intention or desire to make a withdrawal and of the amount to be withdrawn, either in dollars or by the statement that the withdrawal is to be in full or words to that effect. Any such notice shall also be invalid, subject to the subsequent provisions of this paragraph, unless it contains the following: its date; the time to elapse previous to making the withdrawal, which time shall be not less than the period prescribed for such notice by the by-laws or contract; a reference to or description of the shares or investment certificates from which the withdrawal is to be made sufficient for ready and clear identification; an address to which the association may send notices to such shareholder or certificate holder; and a statement that the title to the shares or investment certificates is the same as when issued, or if such is not the case, a statement of the state of such title as it then is. The omission of any fact or statement required by the preceding sentence shall not render a notice invalid, however, unless (a) within seven days after the receipt of such notice the association shall notify the shareholder or certificate holder of such omission, and (b) such omission shall not be corrected within seven days after such notice. A shareholder or certificate holder may at any time revoke or waive, either in whole or in part, a notice of intention to withdraw and thereupon such notice shall become invalid either in whole or as to such part, as the case may be.

All notices of intention to withdraw shall be filed when and as received by each association or by the several offices thereof in the order in which they are received, and each shall be kept on file with the exact time of the receipt thereof noted thereon or recorded, until it is paid or becomes invalid. When any notice shall have been on file for the period prescribed therefor, or for the period stated in such notice as the period to elapse previous to making the withdrawal (whichever shall be longer) such notice shall be a "matured notice" for all the purposes of this act.

No shareholder or certificate holder whose shares or investment certificates are pledged as security for a loan from the association issuing such shares or investment certificates shall be permitted to make a withdrawal or be entitled to give any valid notice of intention to withdraw in respect of such shares or investment certificates until the indebtedness for which such shares or investment certificates are security has been fully paid, except that withdrawals therefrom may be made without notice provided the full amount of such withdrawals shall be used to pay such indebtedness or any part thereof; provided, that in the case of loans upon the mutual plan, such withdrawals without notice shall be permitted only at the option of the association unless the entire indebtedness shall be simultaneously paid.

No valid notice of intention to withdraw may be given in respect of definite term investment certificates, nor shall the holders thereof be entitled to withdraw prior to the maturity thereof except at the option of the association issuing such certificates; provided, however, that if an association is on a pro rata basis, as hereinafter defined, the holder of any definite term investment certificate which has not reached the date of its maturity may, notwithstanding the expressed date of maturity thereof, give thirty days' notice of intention to withdraw, and at the expiration of such period such notice shall be a "matured notice" and such holder shall be entitled to withdraw, subject to section 6.02 of this act. Every definite term investment certificate shall expressly state that such notice for said period of thirty days may be given at any time prior to the date of the maturity thereof in the event that such association shall thereafter be on a pro rata basis.

If the shareholder or certificate holder shall tender his certificate for surrender, duly endorsed, within ten days after any valid notice of intention to withdraw shall have matured, he shall be entitled, subject to section 6.02 of this act, to receive the withdrawal value of his shares or investment certificates or of that part thereof referred to in such notice, which withdrawal value is hereby defined as the full amount paid in upon the shares or investment certificates surrendered exclusive of the entrance fee, if any, together with dividends, profits or interest, if any, applicable thereto, subject to such adjustment of earnings or interest as may be provided by by-law or contract. Shareholders or certificate holders who shall have given notice of intention to withdraw and who shall fail to tender their certificates for surrender within ten days after notice from the association that funds are available for the payment thereof shall have no right to withdraw except after giving new notice of intention to do so and such prior notice of intention to withdraw shall become invalid for all of the purposes of this act; provided, such notice from the association shall have stated that unless such certificates shall be tendered for surrender within such ten-day period the holder shall have no right to withdraw except after giving new notice of intention to do so.

If in the case of any association the sum of the following, to wit, (1) the value of all shares or investment certificates or parts thereof in respect of which valid notices of intention to withdraw (whether or not the same shall be matured) shall be on file and unpaid, including notices of intention to withdraw by defaulting shareholders pursuant to section 3.05 of this act as well as notices of withdrawal generally pursuant to section 6.01 of this act; (2) the value of all shares which shall have matured pursuant to section 3.03 of this act and which shall be unpaid; (3) the value of all investment certificates in respect of which the holders, pursuant to section 5.07 of this act but subject to section 6.02 of this act, shall be entitled to receive the redemption price but which shall be unpaid, and (4) the value of all definite term investment certificates which shall have reached the expressed date of their maturity but which shall be unpaid, shall exceed three per cent of the value of all outstanding shares and investment certificates of such association, then such association, unless it is on a pro rata basis, shall be an "association on notice" for all the purposes of this act. If in the case of any association said sum shall exceed fifteen per cent of the value of all outstanding shares and investment certificates of such association, then such association shall be an "association on a pro rata basis" for all the purposes of this act; provided, however, that if said sum shall exceed ten per cent of the value of all outstanding shares and investment certificates of such association, then its board of directors may at their option by resolution declare such association to be on a pro rata basis, and thereupon such association shall be an "association on a pro rata basis" for all the purposes of this act. An association which is on notice or on a pro rata basis shall continue to be on notice or on a pro rata basis, as the case may be, notwithstanding the fact that the sum of the foregoing items may become less than the respective percentages aforesaid, unless and until all of the foregoing items shall be paid or funds shall be available for the payment thereof. In making computations for the purpose of this paragraph, shares and investment certificates shall not be deemed to be unpaid if the association has funds available for the payment thereof and has given notice of that fact to the respective holders thereof.

Sec. 6.02. Limitation on withdrawals. The term "matured withdrawal claims," as used in this article, shall include each and all of the following, to wit, (1) the value of all shares or investment certificates or parts thereof, in respect of which valid notices of intention to withdraw shall be on file, matured and unpaid, including notices of intention to withdraw by defaulting shareholders pursuant to section 3.05 of this act, as well as notices of withdrawal generally pursuant to section 6.01 of this act; (2) the value of all shares which shall have matured pursuant to section 3.03 of this act and which shall be unpaid; (3) the value of all investment certificates in respect of which the holders, pursuant to section 5.07 of this act but subject to section 6.02 of this act, shall be entitled to receive the redemption price, but which shall be unpaid; and (4) the value of all definite term investment certificates which shall have reached the expressed date of their maturity but which shall be unpaid.

Regardless of whether or not an association is on notice or on a pro rata basis, its obligation to pay matured withdrawal claims, and the right of shareholders and certificate holders to receive payment of matured withdrawal claims, shall be secondary and subsequent to the right of such association to pay, and to provide reasonable reserves for the payment of, the following: taxes, assessments, insurance and other sums necessary to protect and preserve its properties and its interest in properties (including those on the security of which it holds loans); principal and interest on borrowings by such association, otherwise than through the issuance of investment certificates; interest on investment certificates and dividends on shares; rent, compensation of officers, agents, salesmen and other employees, and other usual and ordinary operating expenses of such association; and commitments on its incomplete loans or investments; provided, however, that an association on notice or on a pro rata basis shall not pay any dividends on its stock or distribute any profits to its stockholders or make any loans or investments, except loans or investments pursuant to its obligations incurred before it became an association on notice. Moreover, regardless of whether or not an association is on notice or on a pro rata basis, its obligation to pay matured withdrawal claims, and the right of shareholders and certificate holders to receive payment of matured withdrawal claims, shall be limited to payments from its cash on hand or in bank, proceeds from sale of investments and loans and other cash receipts of such association; and if the association is on notice or on a pro rata basis, shall be further limited to payments pursuant to the subsequent provisions of this section.

If the sum of all matured withdrawal claims exceeds the amount available for that purpose, then, if the association is on notice but is not on a pro rata basis, payment of such matured withdrawal claims shall be made, to the extent of the funds from time to time available for that purpose, as follows:

First: To the payment of withdrawals in respect of investment certificates pursuant to section 6.01 of this act, to the payment of definite term investment certificates which have reached the date of their maturity and to withdrawals through payments following notice of modifications pursuant to section 5.07 of this act, without preference of one type of such withdrawal over the other, according to the priority in time of the maturity of the claims for such withdrawals, which in the case of withdrawals pursuant to said section 6.01 shall be deemed to be the time notice of intention of such withdrawals shall have matured, in the case of withdrawals through payment of definite term investment certificates shall be deemed to be the date of maturity of such certificates, and in the case of withdrawals through payments following notice of modifications pursuant to section 5.07 of this act shall be deemed to be the date of the expiration of the period of such notice of modifications; provided, that as between the holders of certificates upon which the claim for withdrawal shall have matured at the same time, payment shall be made in the order of demand for or notice of such withdrawal, which in the case of definite term investment certificates shall be deemed to be the date of issuance thereof.

Second: To the payment of withdrawals in respect of shares pursuant to sections 3.05 and 6.01 of this act and withdrawals through payment of matured shares pursuant to section 3.03 of this act, without preference of one type of such withdrawal over the other, according to the priority in time of the maturity of the claims for such withdrawals, which in the case of withdrawals pursuant to said sections 3.05 and 6.01 shall be deemed to be the time notice of intention of such withdrawal shall have matured and in the case of withdrawals through payment of matured shares pursuant to said section 3.03 shall be deemed to be the time such shares shall be declared by the board to be matured. In respect of shares so declared to be matured at the same time, then such payment shall be made in the order provided in the by-laws, or in the absence of such provision in the numerical order of issuance.

Notwithstanding anything to the contrary in this act, however, any association which is on notice but not on a pro rata basis may at its option pay in each month, with or without requiring notice of intention to withdraw, and regardless of the nonpayment of any or all matured withdrawal claims, not to exceed fifty dollars per person to any one or more of its shareholders or certificate holders; and withdrawals may be made at any time from pledged shares and investment certificates, whether or not the association is on notice or on a pro rata basis, and without notice; provided, the full amounts of such withdrawals shall be used to pay the indebtedness for which such shares or investment certificates are pledged, or any part thereof; and provided, further, that in the case of loans upon the mutual plan, such withdrawals without notice shall be permitted only at the option of the association unless the entire indebtedness shall be simultaneously paid.

If the sum of all matured withdrawal claims exceeds the amount available for that purpose, then, if the association is on a pro rata basis, payment of such matured withdrawal claims shall be made once in each period of three months, to the extent of the funds available for that purpose, as follows:

First: To all matured withdrawal claims in respect of investment certificates until all sums payable thereon are paid and, as between several holders thereof, pro rata according to the unpaid principal thereof at the time of each payment.

Second: To all matured withdrawal claims in respect of shares until all sums payable thereon are paid and, as between the several holders thereof, pro rata according to the unpaid value thereof at the time of each such payment.

No association shall make any contract waiving in any manner any of the provisions of this section and, if any such contract shall be so made, such contract shall be void.

Nothing contained in this act is intended or shall be construed to impair the obligations of any contract existing at the effective date of this act in respect of the withdrawal or other rights of the holders of shares or investment certificates then outstanding, and the withdrawal and other rights of such holders shall continue to be governed by the obligations of their respective contracts, regardless of the provisions of this act. The provisions of this act, however, shall govern the withdrawal and other rights of the holders of all shares and investment certificates hereafter issued and shall also govern, to the extent that the same do not impair the obligations of contracts existing at the effective date of this act, the withdrawal and other rights of holders of shares and investment certificates then outstanding.

Sec. 6.03. Withdrawals without notice or before maturity. Any association, other than an association on notice or on a pro rata basis, may pay at its option any or all withdrawals without requiring notice of intention to withdraw or before the maturity of a notice of intention to withdraw, but no association shall agree in advance to do so. Any association, other than an association on notice or on a pro rata basis, may at its option pay any or all definite term investment certificates before the expressed date of maturity subject to such adjustment of interest, if any, as may be provided in such certificates, but no association shall agree in advance to do so. Except as otherwise provided in this act in respect of shares and investment certificates pledged to the association issuing the same and except as otherwise so provided in respect of payments in each month not to exceed fifty dollars per person to any one or more shareholders or certificate holders, no association on notice or on a pro rata basis shall pay any withdrawals except upon matured notice of intention to withdraw, nor allow the withdrawal of any definite term investment certificate before the expressed date of its maturity; provided, however, that an association on notice but not on a pro rata basis may pay withdrawals before the maturity of such notices if such withdrawals are paid in the order provided in section 6.02 of this act in respect of associations on notice and not on a pro rata basis; and provided, further, that an association on a pro rata basis shall pay withdrawals of definite term investment certificates after the maturity of notices of intention to withdraw subject to the same conditions as investment certificates of other classes. Any agreement contrary to the provisions of this section shall be void.

Sec. 6.04. Reports while on notice or on a pro rata basis. Each association on notice shall, within twenty-four hours after becoming an association on notice, mail to the commissioner a statement that such association is on notice; and so long as such association is on notice or on a pro rata basis it shall mail to the commissioner daily or otherwise as the commissioner may direct a statement showing (1) the amount of its cash on hand and in bank; (2) the amount of its United States government bonds and treasury certificates; (3) the amount and description of all its other bonds; (4) the amount of all unpaid notices of withdrawal filed with such association; (5) the amount of all borrowings other than through the issuance of investment certificates; (6) the amount of all matured shares and of all definite term investment certificates of such association which shall have reached the date of their maturity; (7) the amount of its incomplete loans; and (8) any other data required by the commissioner.

Sec. 6.05. Delay in paying after one year. Whenever an association shall have been on a pro rata basis for a period of one year, the commissioner may in his discretion forthwith or at any time thereafter take possession of the property, business and assets of such association and retain such possession until its affairs be finally liquidated in the manner provided by law for the liquidation of associations by him, or until such association may be allowed to resume business upon such conditions as may be approved by the commissioner. The right of the commissioner to take possession under this section is not exclusive, but is additional to his right to take possession under each and every other provision of this act.

Sec. 6.06. Payments received while on pro rata basis. In the event of the liquidation or dissolution of any association which shall have been on a pro rata basis, then notwithstanding anything to the contrary in section 13.16 of this act or elsewhere in this act, all sums paid in to such association on investment certificates or shares after such association shall have been on a pro rata basis shall be repaid in full before any payments shall be made to other certificate holders or other creditors or other shareholders, or to stockholders. An association which has issued and outstanding both shares and investment certificates shall not, while on a pro rata basis, accept any money on account of free shares. No association while it is on a pro rata basis shall accept any money on account of investment certificates or shares if the commissioner in writing shall have directed the association not to accept such money."

URGENCY CLAUSE.

SEC. 7. This act is hereby declared to be an urgency measure within the meaning of section 1 of article IV of the constitution of the State of California, and it is deemed necessary for the immediate preservation of the public peace, health and safety that this law shall go into immediate effect. The following is a statement of the facts constituting such urgency: The population of this State and the traffic on the highways thereof are very rapidly increasing and in all probability will in the future continue to so increase. The facilities for transportation in this State are inadequate for the needs of the population thereof and such increased traffic, and it is essential that such facilities be immediately increased and improved by the construction of bridges and other works by bridge and highway districts; and unless such bridges are constructed in the near future the public health and safety will be endangered due to congestion of traffic on existing roads and highways in said State. Moreover, there are at the present time a large number of persons in the State of California who are unemployed and who are without means of livelihood. The construction of bridges and other works by bridge and highway districts of this State will furnish work for a large number of such persons and prevent them from becoming public charges. If the provisions of this act become a law immediately, the sale by such bridge and highway districts of their securities will be furthered, and they will thereby be enabled to obtain without delay the necessary funds for the construction of such bridges and works, and for the employment of a large number of persons hereinabove mentioned who are now without employment, and said districts will also be materially aided in securing bids from contractors and others for the construction of such bridges and works and for the supplying of materials therefor.

SECOND READING OF SENATE BILL NUMBER THREE HUNDRED SEVENTEEN.

Senate Bill No. 317—An act to amend section 21 of chapter 228, Statutes of 1923, entitled "An act to provide for the incorporation and organization and management of bridge and highway districts and to provide for the acquisition and construction by said districts of bridges and approaches thereto, and for the acquisition of all property necessary therefor, and also to provide for the issuance and payment of bonds by said districts, for the levying of taxes and the collection of tolls by said districts and for the annexation of additional territory thereto," relating to funds.

COMMITTEE AMENDMENTS.

During the second reading of the bill, the following committee amendments were offered:

AMENDMENT NUMBER ONE.

On page 1 of the printed bill, strike out the title of said act and insert in lieu thereof the following:

"An act to amend section 21 of the act of the legislature of the State of California entitled, "An act to provide for the incorporation and organization and management of bridge and highway districts and to provide for the acquisition and construction by said districts of bridges and approaches thereto, and for the acquisition of all property necessary therefor, and also to provide for the issuance and payment of bonds by said districts, for the levying of taxes and the collection of tolls by said districts and for the annexation of additional territory thereto," approved May 25, 1923, as amended, relating to bridge and highway districts; and declaring this act to be an urgency measure."

Amendment adopted.

AMENDMENT NUMBER TWO.

On pages 1 and 2 of the printed bill, strike out all of the section in the bill now numbered Section 1 (being lines 1 to 20, inclusive, page 1, and lines 1 to 34, inclusive, on page 2) and insert in lieu thereof the following:

"SECTION 1. Section 21 of the act of the Legislature of the State of California entitled "An act to provide for the incorporation and organization and management of bridge and highway districts and to provide for the acquisition and construction of said districts of bridges and approaches thereto, and for the acquisition of all property necessary therefor, and also to provide for the issuance and payment of bonds by said districts, by the levying of taxes and the collection of tolls by said districts and for the annexation of additional territory thereto," approved May 25, 1923, as amended, is hereby amended to read as follows:

Sec. 21. (a) Interest during construction. At or before the time of issuing any bonds the board of directors shall estimate (1) the total cost of constructing and/or acquiring the works for which such bonds are to be issued, (2) the period of construction of such work and (3) the amount of bonds which will be required to pay such total estimated cost and to pay interest on the bonds during such estimated period of construction and six months thereafter. No bonds shall be issued if such estimated amount of bonds required to pay such estimated cost and interest shall exceed the total amount of bonds authorized to be issued as provided in this act. Bonds may be issued at any time or from time to time and shall be issued in such amount or amounts not exceeding the total amount of bonds authorized as will produce a sum sufficient to pay the cost of constructing and/or acquiring such works and interest on the bonds so issued during the period of construction and six months thereafter; provided, however, that failure to issue the full amount of bonds herein specified shall not invalidate any bonds of the district. If the completion of construction of the works shall for any reason be delayed beyond the period so estimated for such construction the board of directors shall cause a tax to be levied and collected in the manner provided in section 14 sufficient to produce the amount required to pay the interest which will accrue on the bonds during such period of delay; provided, however, that if during the month of July next preceding the expiration of the period so estimated it shall appear to the board of directors that the construction of the works is likely to be delayed beyond the period so estimated the board shall estimate the period of such delay and cause a tax to be levied and collected sufficient to produce the amount required to pay the interest which will accrue on the bonds during such estimated period of delay; and provided, further, that the amount of such tax shall be reduced to the extent that the district has funds on hand and available for the purpose of paying such interest.

(b) Surplus of bond proceeds. If there shall remain a surplus of the proceeds of bonds issued by the district, including premium, if any, after paying the cost of constructing and/or acquiring such works and interest on the bonds during the actual period of construction and for a period of six months thereafter, there shall be set aside out of such surplus in a reserve interest fund an amount equal to one year's interest on the bonds, or, if such surplus shall be less than one year's interest on the bonds, all of such surplus shall be so set aside. Such fund shall be deposited as other funds of the district or invested in securities which are or may hereafter be made legal for the security of public funds when deposited in banks, and shall be used solely for the payment of interest on such bonds whenever there shall be a deficit in the revenues of the works and only to the extent of such deficit. If such surplus shall exceed one year's interest on the bonds, the balance shall be placed in the fund for the payment of such bonds.

(c) Pledge of revenues. The board of directors shall in each fiscal year set aside in separate funds out of the revenues of the works sufficient sums

- (1) To pay the operating expenses of the district,
- (2) To provide for repairs and depreciation of the works,
- (3) To pay the interest of such bonds as it becomes due, and
- (4) To provide a sinking or other fund for the payment of such bonds as they become due, and the revenues of the works are hereby pledged to such purposes.

(d) Provisions for deficit of revenues. For the purpose of paying the principal or interest of bonds due or to become due within four months, and not otherwise adequately provided for, the district may borrow money in anticipation of the receipt of either the revenues and taxes of the fiscal year in which the loan is made or the revenues and taxes of the next succeeding fiscal year, and such loan shall be payable not later than the end of such next succeeding fiscal year. Negotiable notes shall be issued for all moneys so borrowed, which notes may be renewed from time to time, and money may be borrowed upon new notes from time to time after the payment of any indebtedness evidenced thereby; but all such notes and loans shall mature within the time limited for the payment of the original loan. No money shall be so borrowed at a rate of interest exceeding the maximum rate permitted by law. Such notes may be disposed of in such manner as the board of directors may determine. All such notes shall be authorized by a resolution of the board of directors, which shall fix the actual or maximum face amount of the notes, the actual or maximum rate of interest to be paid upon the amount borrowed and the actual or approximate maturity of the notes. The form and manner of execution of such notes shall be determined by the board of directors.

After the expiration of the period which was estimated, as above provided, before the issuance of any bonds as the period for the construction of the works, the board of directors shall, in the month of July in each year, cause a tax to be levied and collected in the manner provided in section 14 in an amount, after deducting any available and applicable moneys on hand (but in no event moneys in the reserve interest fund) and the estimated amount of revenues of the works for the ensuing twelve months, such estimated amount not to exceed the actual revenues for the preceding twelve months (or, if the works shall not have been in operation for as long as twelve months, not to exceed an amount computed on the basis of the average daily revenues for such lesser period), sufficient to produce the sums required by paragraph (c) of this section to be set aside into separate funds, as well as any deficit in such funds and the principal and interest of any outstanding revenue and tax anticipation notes.

The taxes herein required to be levied and collected shall be in addition to all other taxes levied for county or city and county purposes, and all taxable property of the district shall be and remain liable to be taxed as herein provided until the entire principal and interest of the bonded indebtedness of the district has been paid in full.

(e) Surplus of revenues. To the extent, if any, that the revenues of the works for any fiscal year shall contain a surplus over and above an amount sufficient to provide the sums required to be set aside out of such revenues as hereinabove provided and the amount of any deficit of revenues for any preceding fiscal year and a sum equal to the estimated operating expenses of the district and repairs of the works for the ensuing six months, there shall be set aside out of such surplus and deposited in the reserve interest fund a sum equal to one year's interest on the bonds then outstanding less the amount already contained in such reserve interest fund. Any remainder of such surplus shall be divided by the board of directors and apportioned to each county or city and county within the district in the proportion which the assessed value of property within such county, city and county, or part of a county within the district bears to the total assessed value of property within the district; in case a part only of a county is located within the district, the amount so apportioned to such county shall be deemed a partial payment of county taxes for the current or next succeeding year upon property situate within that portion of the district which lies within such county, and be credited pro rata against such taxes.

(f) Miscellaneous. Prior to the preparation of definitive bonds the board may issue temporary bonds under the same restrictions imposed as to definitive bonds, with or without coupons and in any denomination or denominations, which temporary bonds shall be exchangeable for definitive bonds upon the issuance of the latter. If, after any bond has been duly signed by any officer or officers thereunto authorized, such officer or officers shall cease to hold such office, such bond may nevertheless be delivered with like effect as if the same had been signed by the one or more holding such office or offices at the time of delivery. The bonds may be made registerable as to principal alone or as to both principal and interest under such terms and conditions as may be fixed by the board prior to the issuance thereof. The board is authorized to purchase any bonds from moneys in the sinking or other fund for the payment of bonds, at not more than the par value thereof. All bonds so purchased shall be cancelled and shall not again be issued."

(3) Add to the end of the bill the following:

"Sec. 2. This act is hereby declared to be an urgency measure within the meaning of section 1 of article four of the constitution of the State of California, and it is deemed necessary for the immediate preservation of the public peace, health and safety that this law shall go into immediate effect. The following is a statement of the facts constituting such urgency: The population of this state and the traffic on the highways thereof are very rapidly increasing and in all probability will in the future continue to so increase. The facilities for transportation in this state are inadequate for the needs of the population thereof and such increased traffic, and it is essential that such facilities be immediately increased and improved by the construction of bridges and other works by bridge and highway districts; and unless such bridges and other works are constructed in the near future the public health and safety will be endangered due to congestion of traffic on existing roads and highways in said state. Moreover, there are at the present time a large number of persons in the State of California who are unemployed and who are without means of livelihood. The construction of bridges and other works by bridge and highway districts of this state will furnish work for a large number of such persons and prevent them from becoming public charges. If the provisions of this act become a law immediately, the sale by such bridge and highway districts of their securities will be furthered and they will thereby be enabled to obtain without delay the necessary funds for the construction of such bridges and works and for the employment of a large number of persons hereinabove mentioned who are now without employment, and said districts will also be materially aided in securing bids from contractors and others for the construction of such bridges and works and for the supplying of materials therefor."

Amendment adopted.

Bill read second time, ordered to print, and re-referred to Committee on Roads and Highways.

SEC. 3. Section 4 of the act cited in the title hereof, is hereby amended to read as follows:

Sec. 4. Upon the filing of such application, it shall be the duty of the commissioner to examine it and the other papers and documents filed therewith, and he may, if he deems it advisable, make or have made a detailed examination, audit, and investigation of the applicant and its affairs. If he finds that the proposed plan of business of the applicant is not unfair, unjust, or inequitable, that it intends to fairly and honestly transact its business, and that the securities that it proposes to issue and the methods to be used by it in issuing or disposing of them are not such as, in his opinion, will work a fraud upon the purchaser thereof, the commissioner shall issue to the applicant a permit authorizing it to issue and dispose of securities, as therein provided, in this state, in such amounts and for such considerations and upon such terms and conditions as the commissioner may in said permit provide. Otherwise, he shall deny the application and refuse such permit and notify the applicant in writing of his decision. Every permit shall recite in bold type that the issuance thereof is permissive only and does not constitute a recommendation or endorsement of the securities permitted to be issued. The commissioner may impose conditions requiring the deposit in escrow of securities, the impoundment of the proceeds from the sale thereof, limiting the expense in connection with the sale thereof and such other conditions as he may deem reasonable and necessary or advisable to insure the disposition of the proceeds of such securities in the manner and for the purposes provided in such permit. He may, from time to time, amend, alter or revoke any permit issued by him, or temporarily suspend the rights of the applicant under such permit.

SEC. 4. Section 5 is hereby added to the act cited in the title hereof, to read as follows:

SEC. 5. The commissioner, whenever in his opinion the further sale of any securities by any company would be unfair, unjust or inequitable to the purchasers thereof, may order any company to desist and to refrain from the further sale of its securities.

He shall have the power to establish such rules and regulations as may be reasonable or necessary to carry out the purposes and provisions of this act.

SEC. 5. Section 6 of the act cited in the title hereof, is hereby amended to read as follows:

SEC. 6. No person or company shall act as an agent or broker until such person or company shall have first applied for and secured from the commissioner a certificate, then in effect, authorizing such person or company so to do. Every such certificate shall expire on the thirty-first day of December next after its issuance, unless sooner suspended or revoked. To secure such certificate, the applicant shall make and file in the office of the commissioner an application therefor in writing, verified by or in behalf of the applicant. In such application, the applicant shall set forth, in addition to such other information as may be required by the commissioner:

1. The name and address of the applicant, and if it be a corporation, association, or joint stock company, the name and address of each of its managing officers and agents; and, if it be a partnership, the name and address of each of the partners;

2. A succinct statement of facts showing that the applicant, and its managing officers and agents, if it be a corporation, or members, if it be a partnership, have a good business reputation;

3. If the applicant is a broker, the general plan and character of the business of the applicant.

At the time of filing an application for a broker's certificate, the applicant shall file with the commissioner of corporations a good and sufficient bond for twenty-five thousand dollars, payable to the people of the State of California, for the use and benefit of any interested person, executed by said applicant and by sufficient surety or sureties, and to be approved by the commissioner of corporations. Said bond shall be conditioned upon the strict compliance with the provisions of this act, the faithful performance of all the terms and conditions of any installment purchase contracts set forth in this act, the honest and faithful application of all funds received and the faithful and honest performance of all obligations and undertakings in the purchase or sale of securities, by said broker, his agents and employees. Said bond shall be further conditioned upon the payment of all damages suffered by any person damaged or defrauded by reason of the violation of any of the provisions of this act, or by reason of any fraud connected with or growing out of any transaction contemplated by the provisions of this act. Any person who sustains an injury covered by such bond, may in addition to any other remedy that he may have, bring an action in his own name upon said bond for the recovery of any damages sustained by him. Upon such action being commenced the commissioner of corporations may in his discretion, require the filing of a new bond, and immediately upon the recovery in any action on such bond, such broker shall file a new bond, and upon failure to file the same within ten days in either case such failure shall constitute sufficient grounds for the suspension or revocation of such broker's certificate.

For filing such application, the applicant shall pay a fee as hereinafter provided. If the applicant is a corporation or association organized under the laws of any other state, territory, or government, it shall file with its application a copy of its articles of incorporation or association, together with a certificate executed by the proper office of such state, territory, or government not more than thirty days before the filing of such application, showing that such applicant is authorized to transact business in such state, territory, or government, and also in such form as the commissioner may prescribe, its written instrument, irrevocably appointing the commissioner and his successor in office its true and lawful attorney upon whom all process in any action or proceeding against it, arising out of or founded upon the fraud of such applicant in the sale of securities within this state, or in any action upon any bond provided by this section, may be served, with the same effect as if said corporation or association were organized or created under the laws of this state and had been lawfully served with process therein.

(c) That the sale of the securities proposed to be sold by it would not be unfair, unjust or inequitable to the purchasers thereof;

(d) That neither it nor its officers or members have violated any of the provisions of this act or of chapter 226 of the statutes of 1923; and

(e) That neither it nor its officers or members have engaged or are about to engage in any fraudulent transaction,

Otherwise, he shall refuse the same and deny the application and notify the applicant of his decision; provided, however, that if the only ground for such denial falls under subdivision (d) or (e) of this section the commissioner may, in his discretion, waive such ground for denial and issue a certificate to the applicant. The commissioner may at any time temporarily suspend any broker's or agent's license issued by him if he has reason to suspect the existence of any of the grounds, hereinabove enumerated, for the denial of an application for a broker's or agent's license. If, at the expiration of sixty days from the date of such suspension, the license so suspended has not expired or has not been revoked, as hereinafter provided, it shall be deemed reinstated. The commissioner must revoke any broker's or agent's certificate, if, after hearing upon notice, he shall find the existence of any of the grounds, hereinabove enumerated, for the denial of an application for a broker's or agent's license; provided, however, that such revocation shall be discretionary with the commissioner if the only ground for such revocation falls under subdivision (d) or (e) of this section.

Every such certificate shall expire on the thirty-first day of December next after its issuance unless sooner suspended or revoked.

To secure such certificate, the applicant shall make and file in the office of the commissioner an application therefor in writing, verified by or in behalf of the applicant. In such application, the applicant shall set forth, in addition to such other information as may be required by the commissioner,

(d) The general plan, character and method in which applicant proposes to conduct its business.

If the applicant is a corporation or an association organized under the laws of any other state, territory or government, it shall file with its application a copy of its articles of incorporation or association, together with a certificate executed by the proper officer of such state, territory or government, not more than thirty days before the filing of such application, showing that such applicant is authorized to transact business in said state, territory or government, and also in such form as the commissioner may prescribe its written instrument irrevocably appointing the commissioner and his successor in office its true and lawful attorney upon whom all process in any action or proceeding against it, arising out of or founded upon the fraud of such applicant in the conduct of its business as investment counsel, may be served with the same effect as if said corporation or association were organized or created under the laws of this state and had been lawfully served with process therein.

The commissioner shall examine such application for an investment counsel's certificate and shall make such further investigation of the applicant and its affairs as he shall deem advisable. If from such examination the commissioner shall be satisfied:

(a) That the applicant and its officers, directors and members, if any, are of good business repute and in the opinion of the commissioner qualified by experience and education to conduct an investment counsel business;

(b) That neither the applicant nor its officers, directors or members, if any, have violated any of the provisions of this act or of chapter 226 of the statutes of 1923; and

(c) That neither the applicant nor its officers, directors or members, if any, have engaged or are about to engage in any fraudulent transaction, he shall issue such certificate. Otherwise, he shall deny the application and notify the applicant of his decision; provided, however, that if the only ground for such denial falls under subdivision (b) or (c) of this section, the commissioner may, in his discretion, waive such ground for denial and issue a certificate to the applicant.

The commissioner may at any time temporarily suspend any investment counsel's certificate issued by him if he has reason to suspect the existence of any of the grounds, hereinabove enumerated, for the denial of an application for an investment counsel's certificate. If, at the expiration of sixty days from the date of such suspension, the certificate so suspended has not expired or has not been revoked, as hereinafter provided, it shall be deemed reinstated. The commissioner must revoke any investment counsel's certificate, if, after hearing upon notice, he shall find the existence of any of the grounds, hereinabove enumerated, for the denial of an application for an investment counsel's certificate; provided, however, that such revocation shall be discretionary with the commissioner if the only ground for such revocation falls under subdivision (b) or (c) of this section.

AMENDMENT NUMBER TWO.

On page 9, line 45, of the printed bill, insert a new subdivision to be numbered "16", and to read as follows, to wit:

"16. In lieu of drawing a warrant against the general fund of the district in the manner and for the purposes provided in subdivisions numbered 14 and 15 of this section, the board of trustees of the district may raise the amounts contemplated by said subdivisions in the manner following, to wit:

(a) Said board of trustees shall declare whether or not in the judgment of said board, it is necessary or advisable that a supplemental assessment be levied against the lands of the district for the purpose of raising the amounts required under the provisions of subdivisions, 14a and 14b of this section, or either thereof, and whether or not a sufficient assessment should be levied for either or both of said purposes, and if, in said resolution said board shall determine that it is for the best interest of the district that such supplemental assessment shall be levied, then such supplemental assessment shall be levied in the manner following, to wit:

(b) The board of trustees shall prepare and certify an assessment list for said supplemental assessment in the form prescribed by section 3461 of this code. The amount of said supplemental assessment shall not exceed ten per cent of the principal of the refunding bonds to be sold, plus the amount if any to be raised by such supplemental assessment to pay interest on said refunding bonds to the date of maturity of the bonds to be refunded as aforesaid. The amount of said supplemental assessment shall be spread only upon the tracts of land in the district upon which an assessment is then outstanding for payment of the bonds to be refunded and shall be spread on said tracts in proportion to the amounts then assessed against assessment shall be levied in the manner following, to wit:

(c) Said list when completed shall be filed with the clerk of the board of supervisors of the county. The board of supervisors shall appoint a time when it shall meet for the purpose of hearing objections to said supplemental assessment and notice of such hearing shall be given by publication for two weeks in some newspaper of general circulation published in said county. At any time before the date of such hearing any person interested may file written objections to such supplemental assessment stating the ground of such objections, which statement shall be verified by affidavit of such person or some other person who is familiar with the facts. At said hearing the board of supervisors may correct any errors appearing in said supplemental assessment and shall then make an order approving said supplemental assessment and shall endorse such order upon said assessment list, which said endorsement shall be signed by the chairman of the board of supervisors and attested by the clerk thereof. Such decision of said board of supervisors except as hereinafter provided, shall be final and thereafter said assessment list shall be conclusive evidence that the said supplemental assessment has been made and levied according to law. The list shall then be filed with the county treasurer, or if the district is situated in more than one county then the original list must be filed in the county where the greater portion of the lands of said district is situated and copies thereof certified by the treasurer must be filed with the treasurer of each of the other counties. No objection to such supplemental assessment shall be considered by the board of supervisors or allowed in any other action or proceeding unless such objection shall be made in writing to the board of supervisors as above specified.

(d) Any person aggrieved by the decision of the board of supervisors may commence an action in the superior court of the county in which the greater part of such district is situated to have said supplemental assessment corrected, modified or annulled. Such action must be commenced within five (5) days after said assessment list has been filed in the office of the county treasurer. If said action shall not be commenced within five (5) days, no action or defense shall thereafter be maintained attacking the legality of said supplemental assessment in any respect.

(e) After said approved assessment list has been so filed the charges therein specified shall be a lien upon the parcels of land so assessed and shall impart notice thereof to all persons. Said supplemental assessment shall be called for immediate payment and shall become delinquent by declaration made in said resolution at a specified date at least five days prior to the date fixed for the sale of said refunding bonds; and at least thirty days time to pay said supplemental assessment shall be given to the landowners between the date of call and the date of delinquency. Said supplemental assessment shall not bear interest and shall be payable only in gold coin of the United States. Notice of said supplemental assessment and of said call thereon must be personally served upon each owner of land in said district or in lieu of personal service must be sent through the mail addressed to said owner at his place of residence if known, or entered upon the assessment roll of the county and if not known, at the place where the principal office of the district is situated or be published once a week for two weeks successively in some newspaper of general circulation and devoted to the publication of general news within the district and if no such newspaper be published within the district then publication may be made in some newspaper published in the county seat of the county where the greater portion of said district is situated. Upon delinquency a penalty of ten per cent shall be added. If the landowners in any district shall voluntarily pay to the treasurer of the county, on the call of the board of trustees without the levy of such supplemental assessment, the amount required by the board of trustees for the aforesaid purposes as provided on the lands in the district as herein provided then no such supplemental assessment shall be levied.

(f) If a sale of said refunding bonds is consummated by payment of the purchase price thereof and the delivery of the bonds then the board of trustees of the district shall proceed to enforce payment of any delinquencies in the said supplemental assessment in the manner set forth in section 3466 of this code, and the provisions of said section 3466 shall apply to all subsequent proceedings in enforcing collection of said supplemental assessment.

(g) In the event said board of trustees shall elect to raise said amounts through the levy of a supplemental assessment as in this subdivision 16 provided, then said board of trustees shall not direct that a warrant be issued against the general or maintenance fund of said district in favor of the county treasurer as contemplated by subdivision 14 of this section, but that instead, such warrant shall be issued against the fund created by the supplemental assessment levied and collected pursuant to this subdivision.

Sec. 2. The term "waste" as used herein shall include underground waste or destruction without beneficial use, surface waste or destruction without beneficial use, waste by reduction of the total quantity of recoverable crude petroleum oil in any underground source of supply by the careless or improper drilling or operation of wells, and the waste incident to or resulting from the production of crude petroleum oil when the current production together with the amount of crude petroleum oil and/or its products in storage exceeds the current requirements for use within and for shipment to points without the state, and for the maintenance in storage of such reserves of crude petroleum oil and/or its products as are reasonably necessary to meet and insure the continuity of an adequate supply of crude petroleum oil and/or its products for such current requirements. The loss by evaporation or leakage and the increased hazard of loss from fire and other causes resulting from the storage of crude petroleum oil and/or its products in excess of the quantities which are reasonably necessary to insure continuity of an adequate supply for such current requirements is waste within the meaning of this act.

Sec. 3. There is hereby created the oil conservation commission, which shall consist of three (3) members who shall be chosen as follows: "Within thirty (30) days after this act becomes effective the state oil and gas supervisor shall call a meeting, at one of his offices in the State of California designated by him, of the members of the five boards of district oil and gas commissioners, elected under the provisions of an act of the State of California entitled "An act to protect the natural resources of petroleum and gas from waste and destruction; relating to the creation of a division in the department of natural resources for the prevention of such waste and destruction; providing for the appointment of a state oil and gas supervisor; prescribing his duties and powers; fixing his compensation; providing for the appointment of deputies and employees; providing for their duties and compensation; providing for the inspection of petroleum and gas wells; requiring all persons operating petroleum and gas wells to make certain reports; permitting and authorizing agreements in the interests of conservation; providing for suits by the director of the department of natural resources in the name of the people of the State of California; providing procedure for arbitration of departmental rulings; creating a fund for the purposes of the act; providing for assessment of charges to be paid by operators and providing for the collection thereof; and making an appropriation for the purposes of this act.", approved June 10, 1915, chapter 718; amended 1917, chapter 759; amended 1919, chapter 536; amended 1921, chapter 912; amended 1929, chapter 535. Each district oil and gas commissioner shall be entitled to one vote for each member of the oil conservation commission and the person receiving a majority vote of all of said district oil and gas commissioners for each of said offices shall be declared to be elected thereto. The state oil and gas supervisor shall thereupon notify such person of his election and transmit a certificate of the same to the secretary of state of the State of California. Each person so elected shall, within thirty (30) days after notice of his election as aforesaid, qualify by taking oath of office and by filing the same with the secretary of state as required by law. The term of office of each of said three commissioners shall commence on September 1, 1931, and shall be as hereinabove set forth. Within thirty (30) days next preceding the expiration of the respective terms of office of incumbent commissioners, successors shall be elected in the same manner as hereinabove set forth, for terms of four (4) years, respectively, or in case of vacancy, forthwith, to fill the unexpired term. All such successors shall be qualified as hereinabove stated and shall serve for the terms for which they shall be elected, respectively.

The state oil and gas supervisor shall be ex officio secretary of said commission and shall keep a record of its proceedings, and his office shall be the office of said commission. The powers and duties of such commission shall be as hereinafter set forth. Said commission shall have power to appoint such deputies and to employ such legal, technical, clerical and other assistants as may be necessary to enable it to perform its duties under this act and shall fix their compensation, which, together with all reasonable and necessary costs and charges of the enforcement of this act, shall be payable out of the petroleum oil gas fund hereinafter referred to.

Immediately upon the commencement of the respective terms of office of the oil conservation commissioners the state oil and gas supervisor shall call the first meeting thereof, giving at least five (5) days' written notice to each commissioner of the time and place thereof. At such meeting the said commission shall appoint a chairman and such officers other than secretary as it shall deem necessary and shall adopt rules and regulations for the conduct of its meetings.

Sec. 4. It shall be the duty of the oil conservation commission to inquire into the production of crude petroleum oil in this state and the extent of the current requirements for use within and for shipment to points without the state and of requirements for the maintenance in storage of such reserves as are reasonably necessary to meet and insure the continuity of an adequate supply of crude petroleum oil and/or its products for such requirements, in order to enable it to determine whether or not waste as hereinbefore defined exists. For this purpose the oil conservation commission shall have the power and it shall be its duty to adopt such rules and regulations as shall enable it to ascertain all the facts upon which the proper and adequate enforcement of this act shall depend. Said commission shall have the right to require any producer or producers of such crude petroleum oil or any operators of any drilling or producing well or wells to make and file sworn statements of production of or facts concerning any well or wells under their control whenever and as often and for such periods as it may specify and such well or wells may be inspected and/or gauged and/or the production therefrom gauged in such manner and under such rules and regulations as may be prescribed by such commission.

All of the records of the oil and gas supervisor of the State of California shall be available for the use of said oil conservation commission under this act.

Said commission shall likewise have the power to require owners and/or operators of any storage facilities of crude petroleum oil and/or its products in this state to make and file sworn statements regarding the same and the quantity and quality of the oil and/or its products in storage, in such manner and to such extent as shall be prescribed by said commission by rules and regulations or by specific order in the performance of its duties under this act.

Sec. 5. Upon complaint of the oil conservation commission, or upon the verified complaint of any producer of crude petroleum oil in this state, or upon complaint of the director of natural resources of this state, that waste of crude petroleum oil as hereinbefore defined is being committed in this state, it shall hold a hearing in one of the counties in which it is alleged that such waste is being committed, to determine whether or not such or any waste is being committed. At least five (5) days prior to the date of said hearing the commission shall cause notice of the time and place of said hearing to be published in a newspaper of general circulation printed and published in each county in which it is alleged that waste is being committed, and to be posted in at least three (3) conspicuous places in each field or locality in which it is alleged that such waste is being committed; provided, however, that in lieu of notice by posting or by publication, personal service of such notice upon any person, firm or corporation at least five (5) days prior to the date of said hearing shall be sufficient notice of such hearing to such person, firm or corporation. Said notice shall also specify the commonly accepted name or general description of the field or fields or locality or localities in which the waste is alleged to be taking place and the county or counties in which the same are situated. At said hearing all persons interested shall be entitled to be heard and to introduce evidence. Said hearing shall first be held at the place specified in said notice and may be by the commission adjourned from time to time for further hearing or hearings at such place or places as may be specified by it upon such adjournments, respectively, in the county or any of the counties in which it is alleged waste is being committed as set forth in the original notice of such hearing. Each member of the board of oil conservation commissioners and each representative of such commission appointed and designated to take testimony at the hearing provided herein shall have power to administer oaths, take affidavits and issue subpoenas for the attendance of witnesses at such hearing. The superior court in and for the county, or city and county, in which any hearing may be held under the authority of this act shall have power to compel the attendance of witnesses, the giving of testimony and the production of papers as required by any subpoena issued hereunder. The oil conservation commission or its representatives before whom the testimony is to be given or produced may, in case of refusal of any witness to attend or testify or produce any papers required by such subpoena, report to the superior court in said county, or city and county, by petition, setting forth that due notice has been given of the time and place of the attendance of said witness or the production of said papers and that the witness has been summoned in the manner prescribed in this act and has failed and refused to attend or produce the papers required by the subpoena before the commission or its representative in the case or proceeding named in the notice of time and place of hearing and subpoena, or has refused to answer questions propounded to him in the course of said proceedings, and ask an order of said court to compel the witness to attend and testify or produce said papers before the commission or its representative. The court, upon such petition, shall enter an order directing the witness to appear before the court at a time and place to be fixed by the court in such order, the time to be not more than five (5) days from the date of the order, and then and there show cause why he has not attended and testified or produced said papers before the commission or its representative. A copy of said order shall be served upon said witness. If it shall appear to the court that said subpoena was regularly issued by the commission or its representative the court shall thereupon enter an order that said witness shall appear before the commission or its representative at the time and place entered in such order and testify or produce the required papers, and upon failure to obey said witness shall be dealt with as for contempt of court.

If upon the hearing the commission finds that waste is being committed and if such waste be incident to or result from the wasteful production of crude petroleum oil as defined in section 2 hereof, the commission shall make an order fixing therein the amount of nonwasteful production for the State of California and for the several oil fields within the state, respectively, found to be contributing to such waste, and for each such oil field fixing therein the amount of allowable production for the several zones, producing properties and/or well or wells in such oil field, so as to stop said waste. The aggregate amount of production without waste as so determined shall be so allocated by the commission among the different fields and the different zones, properties and wells in the respective fields, as to avoid a diminution in the total amount of petroleum crude oil ultimately recoverable from any field, zone, property or well.

If the commission finds that waste other than waste incident to or resulting from excessive production, as hereinabove set forth, is being committed, it shall enter its order or orders requiring the person, firm or corporation found to be committing such waste to desist from the same within such time and to the extent specified in such order or orders.

Sec. 7. Each order shall state the time during which the same shall be effective and may provide for subsequent hearings for the purpose of determining upon the necessity of and providing for the amendment or modification of any such order. The property or properties or well or wells referred to therein may be described by using the commonly known name or lease designation thereof.

A copy of each order made by the commission shall be mailed to each person, firm or corporation operating any property affected by said order.

No failure to mail copies of any order of the commission as hereinabove provided shall affect the validity of the same.

Any order of the commission may at any time or times be amended or modified by the commission upon hearing, noticed as hereinbefore prescribed for the original hearing or had as provided for in such order.

A copy of each order when made by the commission shall be filed with the director of natural resources of the state.

Sec. 8. If and when an order of the commission shall be made fixing the amount of allowable production from any oil-producing property within the state, and notice thereof shall have been given as hereinbefore provided, no crude petroleum oil produced in violation of such order shall be removed by any third person, firm or corporation from the property where the same was produced.

Sec. 9. If and when any order shall be made by the commission hereunder fixing the quantity of allowable production from any oil-producing property within the state, and notice thereof shall have been given as hereinbefore provided, if thereafter any person, firm or corporation operating any such property shall produce therefrom a quantity of crude petroleum oil in excess of the quantity allowed to such property under said order of the commission, either under a stay of the order by any court proceeding or otherwise, and such order shall be held valid and enforceable by a court of competent jurisdiction as provided in section 11 hereof, the well or wells on said property shall be entirely closed in until such time as the amount which said well or wells could produce under the order equals the amount theretofore produced in excess of the amount allowed by said order. Thereupon such well or wells may be restored to production upon the basis allowed by such order.

Sec. 10. Any producer of crude petroleum oil or operator of any drilling or producing well or wells, or owner or operator of any storage facilities of crude petroleum oil referred to in this act, or employee thereof, who refuses to permit the commission or its representative to inspect the same, and every person, firm, association, corporation, trust or syndicate, whether as principal, agent, servant, employee or otherwise, failing or neglecting or refusing to furnish any report or record or statement which may be required pursuant to the provisions of this act, or who wilfully renders or furnishes a false or fraudulent report or statement or record, is guilty of a misdemeanor.

There may be joined in the same proceeding any number of defendants alleged to be violating the same order, although their properties and interests may be severally owned, may be situated in several counties, and their actual violations of the order may be separate and distinct. In such action the court shall enjoin the defendants from violating said order unless the court shall determine that the order is invalid. In event the order is determined to be invalid, the court may dismiss said action without prejudice to the right and jurisdiction to conduct further hearings and make a new order in the premises by giving notice thereof as in this statute provided. In any action for injunction brought hereunder no restraining order shall be issued ex parte but otherwise the procedure shall be governed by the provisions of chapter 3, title 7, part 2, of the Code of Civil Procedure of the State of California and pending appeal no temporary or permanent injunction issued in such proceeding shall be refused or dissolved or stayed upon the giving of any bond or undertaking, or otherwise.

Sec. 12. The department of natural resources shall annually on or before the first Monday in March, acting in conjunction with the state board of control, make an estimate of the amount of moneys which shall be required to carry out the provisions of this act. Said amount of money shall be provided by assessments levied and collected on the properties of every person, firm, corporation or association operating any well or wells for the production of crude petroleum oil in this state. The charges shall be levied, assessed, equalized and collected in the manner and at the same time as is provided for the collection of the charges under the provisions of an act entitled "An act to protect the natural resources of petroleum and gas, approved June 10, 1912, chapter 718, amended 1917, chapter 759, amended 1919, chapter 536, amended 1921, chapter 912, amended 1929, chapter 535," referred to in section 3 hereof.

On or before July 1, 1932, said sum of fifty thousand dollars shall be returned into the general fund from moneys in the petroleum oil and gas fund.

Sec. 14. Nothing herein contained shall be construed to confer on the oil conservation commission any jurisdiction over any matter or matters given to the state oil and gas supervisor or to the director of natural resources by any law of the State of California or to limit the effect of any such law.

Sec. 15. That the invalidity of any section, subdivision, clause or sentence of this act shall not in any manner affect the validity of the remaining portion thereof."

RESOLUTION.

The following resolution was offered:

By Senators Cleveland, Clock, Ingels, and Christian:

WHEREAS, The present economic conditions existing throughout the State of California have called for strictest economies by our citizens generally; and

It is gratifying to know that they are meeting that situation and readjusting themselves in their various business affairs by making every effort to bring the cost of living within the income and the cost of business operations within the amount available for expenditure.

Taxes for State purposes are a heavy burden in such times and it is the duty of the State officials to do their full part during this important period of readjustment. State expenses should be watched and every effort should be made to prevent the increased cost which is followed by increased taxes. In fact, State officials should attempt to decrease the cost of governmental operations, and we believe that the people of the State of California look upon us as their representatives to assist them in this important program.

Salaries should not be increased at a time when there are plenty of able men and women willing to occupy the offices at the present salaries: therefore, be it

Resolved, by the Senate of the State of California, That it be declared to be the firm policy of the Senate not to favor increases in salaries of public officials at this time, and to discourage all legislation looking to that end.

Resolution referred to Committee on Governmental Efficiency.

This policy has not been since departed from, is now set forth in the provisions of section 1589 of the Penal Code, and in practice has been pursued in a number of instances.

It is to be noted that in the case of People vs. Bigelow, supra, the defendant had, prior to the conviction in that case, been convicted in a federal court of a felony, to wit, the violation of the Harrison Narcotic Act, and the court, noting section 17 of the Penal Code, expressed the view that the former conviction of the defendant was of an offense punishable by imprisonment in the State Prison of this State; that in fact after the commission of such former offense he was sentenced to imprisonment in a federal penitentiary; but that the trial court had committed no error in imposing sentence upon the defendant as being one who had theretofore been convicted of a felony. It is true that in that case the court also noted sections 666, 667 and 668 of the Penal Code, which in substance provide that one who has been convicted of a former offense, which, if committed within this State, would be punishable by imprisonment in the State Prison, is punishable for any subsequent crime committed by him within this State by a punishment more severe than if theretofore he had not suffered such prior conviction. In connection therewith, the court noted that while the so-called State Poison Act under which the defendant was charged was not the counterpart of the Harrison Narcotic Act, yet it announced the same general conduct and provided various penalties for the infraction thereof, ranging from fines, or imprisonment in the county jail, to imprisonment in the State Prison. It was in connection therewith that the court noted section 17 of the Penal Code, and expressed the view that if the punishment is one for which imprisonment could have been had in the State Prison of this State the crime is a felony. So here, the crime for which the person referred to by you was convicted in the federal court was a crime for which he could have been imprisoned in the State Prison of this State under the acts of Congress and of the Legislature of this State heretofore noted, though, in fact, he was not for that crime imprisoned in the State Prison of this State.

It is also to be noted that in other instances where the fact of former conviction of a felony becomes a matter of inquiry, as for example, in a prosecution under the Concealed Weapons Act (Stats. 1923, p. 695), and in the impeachment of a witness (section 2051, C. C. P.), it has been regarded as immaterial whether such previous conviction of a felony was in this State or in another state.

Thus, in the case of People vs. Camperlingo, 69 Cal. App., 466, the defendant was convicted of the offense of having in his possession a pistol after a previous conviction of a felony. In that case, the previous conviction was in another state, and such conviction was admitted in evidence, the court finding that the allegation contained within the indictment was supported by the evidence and the verdict in that particular legally unassailable.

In the case of People vs. Hardwick, 204 Cal. 582, it appears that during the trial, for the purpose of impeaching a witness who was the defendant, evidence was introduced establishing that he had been convicted of the offense of manslaughter in the state of Oklahoma. He therefore sought to introduce an unconditional pardon by the governor of that state, but the trial court excluded such pardon. The Supreme Court held that while the pardon should have been admitted in evidence, yet both the fact of the conviction and the fact of the pardon should have been permitted to go to the jury for them to consider in determining the credibility of the witness.

From your communication, it appears that the person referred to by you was convicted of a felony in California in 1912, and sentenced to San Quentin; that later he was convicted in the federal court in California of violating the Harrison Narcotic Act, which was also a felony. Though the latter conviction was not in fact followed by a punishment of imprisonment in this State, the offense for which such conviction was had in a federal court in this State was one which could have been punished by imprisonment in the State Prison of this State. This brings such person, in my opinion, within the provisions of section 1 of article VII of the California constitution, and as he was a person who had been twice convicted of a felony he could not be granted a pardon unless upon the written recommendation of a majority of the judges of the Supreme Court.

Very truly yours,

(Signed)

U. S. WEBB, Attorney General.

By JESS HESSON, Deputy Attorney General.

SEC. 3. Section 4 of said act is hereby amended to read as follows:

Sec. 4. Upon the filing of such application, it shall be the duty of the commissioner to examine it and the other papers and documents filed therewith, and he may, if he deems it advisable, make or have made a detailed examination, audit, and investigation of the applicant and its affairs. If he finds that the proposed plan of business of the applicant is not unfair, unjust, or inequitable, that it intends to fairly and honestly transact its business, and that the securities that it proposes to issue and the methods to be used by it in issuing or disposing of them are not such as, in his opinion, will work a fraud upon the purchaser thereof, the commissioner shall issue to the applicant a permit authorizing it to issue and dispose of securities, as therein provided, in this state, in such amounts and for such considerations and upon such terms and conditions as the commissioner may in said permit provide. Otherwise, he shall deny the application and refuse such permit and notify the applicant in writing of his decision. Every permit shall recite in bold type that the issuance thereof is permissive only and does not constitute a recommendation or endorsement of the securities permitted to be issued. The commissioner may impose conditions requiring the deposit in escrow of securities, the impoundment of the proceeds from the sale thereof, limiting the expense in connection with the sale thereof and such other conditions as he may deem reasonable and necessary or advisable to insure the disposition of the proceeds of such securities in the manner and for the purposes provided in such permit. He may, from time to time, amend, alter or revoke any permit issued by him, or temporarily suspend the rights of the applicant under such permit.

SEC. 4. Section 5 of said act is hereby amended to read as follows:

Sec. 5. The commissioner, whenever in his opinion the further sale of any securities by any company would be unfair, unjust or inequitable to the purchasers thereof, may order such company to desist and to refrain from the further sale of its securities.

He shall have the power to establish such rules and regulations as may be reasonable or necessary to carry out the purposes and provisions of this act.

SEC. 5. Section 6 of said act is hereby amended to read as follows:

Sec. 6. No person or company shall act as an agent or broker until such person or company shall have first applied for and secured from the commissioner a certificate, then in effect, authorizing such person or company so to do. Every such certificate shall expire on the thirty-first day of December next after its issuance, unless sooner suspended or revoked. To secure such certificate, the applicant shall make and file in the office of the commissioner an application therefor in writing, verified by or in behalf of the applicant. In such application, the applicant shall set forth, in addition to such other information as may be required by the commissioner:

1. The name and address of the applicant, and if it be a corporation, association, or joint stock company, the name and address of each of its managing officers and agents, and, if it be a partnership, the name and address of each of the partners;
2. A succinct statement of facts showing that the applicant, and its managing officers and agents, if it be a corporation, or members, if it be a partnership, have a good business reputation;
3. If the applicant is a broker, the general plan and character of the business of the applicant.

At the time of filing an application for a broker's certificate, the applicant shall file with the commissioner of corporations a good and sufficient bond for five thousand dollars, payable to the people of the State of California, for the use and benefit of any interested person, executed by said applicant and by sufficient surety or sureties, and to be approved by the commissioner of corporations. Said bond shall be conditioned upon the strict compliance with the provisions of this act, the faithful performance of all the terms and conditions of any installment purchase contracts involving the sale of a security, the honest and faithful application of all funds received and the faithful and honest performance of all obligations and undertakings in the purchase or sale of securities, by said broker, his agents and employees. Said bond shall be further conditioned upon the payment of all damages suffered by any person damaged or defrauded by reason of the violation of any of the provisions of this act, or by reason of any fraud connected with or growing out of any transaction contemplated by the provisions of this act. Any person who sustains an injury covered by such bond, may in addition to any other remedy that he may have, bring an action in his own name upon said bond for the recovery of any damages sustained by him. Upon such action being commenced the commissioner of corporations may in his discretion, require the filing of a new bond, and immediately upon the recovery in any action on such bond, such broker shall file a new bond, and upon failure to file the same within ten days in either case, such failure shall constitute sufficient grounds for the suspension or revocation of such broker's certificate.

For filing such application, the applicant shall pay a fee as hereinafter provided. If the applicant is a corporation or association organized under the laws of any other state, territory, or government, it shall file with its application a copy of its articles of incorporation or association, together with a certificate executed by the proper officer of such state, territory, or government not more than thirty days before the filing of such application, showing that such applicant is authorized to transact business in such state, territory, or government, and also in such form as the commissioner may prescribe, its written instrument, irrevocably appointing the commissioner and his successor in office its true and lawful attorney upon whom all process in any action or proceeding against it, arising out of or founded upon the fraud of such applicant in the sale of securities within this state, or in any action upon any bond provided by this section, may be served, with the same effect as if said corporation or association were organized or created under the laws of this state and had been lawfully served with process therein.

SEC. 6. Section 7 of said act is hereby amended to read as follows:

Sec. 7. The commissioner shall examine such application, and shall make such further investigation of the applicant and its affairs as he shall deem advisable. If, from such examination, the commissioner shall be satisfied:

(a) That the applicant and its officers or members, if any, are of good business reputation;

(b) That the applicant has sufficient financial responsibility to carry out the obligations incident to its operations as such broker or agent;

(c) That the sale of the securities proposed to be sold by it would not be unfair, unjust or inequitable to the purchasers thereof;

(d) That neither it nor its officers or members have violated any of the provisions of this act or of chapter 226 of the Statutes of 1923; and

(e) That neither it nor its officers or members have engaged or are about to engage in any fraudulent transaction, he shall issue such certificate. Otherwise, he shall refuse the same and deny the application and notify the applicant of his decision; provided, however, that if the only ground for such denial falls under subdivision (d) or (e) of this section the commissioner may, in his discretion, waive such ground for denial and issue a certificate to the applicant if satisfied that in the particular case such subdivisions would be inapplicable or purely technical, and that the absence of these requirements would in no way interfere with the proper performance by the applicant of his duties as a broker. The commissioner may at any time temporarily suspend any broker's or agent's license issued by him if he has reason to suspect the existence of any of the grounds, hereinabove enumerated, for the denial of an application for a broker's or agent's license. If, at the expiration of sixty days from the date of such suspension, the license so suspending has not expired or has not been revoked, as hereinafter provided, it shall be deemed reinstated. The commissioner must revoke any broker's or agent's certificate, if, after hearing upon notice, he shall find the existence of any of the grounds, hereinabove enumerated, for the denial of an application for a broker's or agent's license; provided, however, that such revocation shall be discretionary with the commissioner if the only ground for such revocation falls under subdivision (d) or (e) of this section and he is satisfied that in the particular case such subdivisions would be inapplicable or purely technical, and that the absence of these requirements would in no way interfere with the proper performance by the applicant of his duties as a broker.

SEC. 7. Section 8 of said act is hereby amended to read as follows:

Sec. 8. Every installment purchase contract involving the sale of a security proposed to be used by any broker shall first be submitted to and approved by the commissioner, and shall contain clauses specifying:

(a) The time within which the purchase of such security is to be made by such broker.

(b) The place of deposit of such security.

(c) The time within which delivery of such security shall be made, after such deposit.

(d) The conditions under which calls for additional margin may be made.

(e) Any other provision which the commissioner may deem necessary for the protection of the parties to the purchase of such security.

SEC. 8. Section 9 of said act is hereby amended to read as follows:

Sec. 9. No person or company, other than a broker, shall act as an investment counsel until such person or company shall have first applied for and secured from the commissioner a certificate then in effect authorizing such person or company so to do. Every such certificate shall expire on the thirty-first day of December next after its issuance unless sooner suspended or revoked.

To secure such certificate, the applicant shall make and file in the office of the commissioner an application therefor in writing, verified by or in behalf of the applicant. In such application, the applicant shall set forth, in addition to such other information as may be required by the commissioner,

(a) The name, residence and post-office address of the applicant;

(b) If a corporation, association, joint stock company, or partnership, the name, residence and post-office address of each of its managing officers, agents or partners, as the case may be;

(c) A succinct statement of facts showing that the applicant and each of its managing officers and agents or partners, as the case may be, is of good business repute and the experience and education which would qualify him to act as investment counsel; and

(d) The general plan, character and method in which applicant proposes to conduct its business.

If the applicant is a corporation or an association organized under the laws of any other state, territory or government, it shall file with its application a copy of its articles of incorporation or association, together with a certificate executed by the proper officer of such state, territory or government, not more than thirty days before the filing of such application, showing that such applicant is authorized to transact business in said state, territory or government, and also in such form as the commissioner may prescribe its written instrument irrevocably appointing the commissioner and his successor in office its true and lawful attorney upon whom all process in any action or proceeding against it, arising out of or founded upon the fraud of such applicant in the conduct of its business as investment counsel, may be served with the same effect as if said corporation or association were organized or created under the laws of this state and had been lawfully served with process therein.

The commissioner shall examine such application for an investment counsel's certificate and shall make such further investigation of the applicant and its affairs as he shall deem advisable. If from such examination the commissioner shall be satisfied:

(a) That the applicant and its officers, directors and members, if any, are of good business repute and in the opinion of the commissioner qualified by experience and education to conduct an investment counsel business;

(b) That neither the applicant nor its officers, directors or members, if any, have violated any of the provisions of this act or of chapter 226 of the Statutes of 1923; and

(c) That neither the applicant nor its officers, directors or members, if any, have engaged or are about to engage in any fraudulent transaction, he shall issue such certificate. Otherwise, he shall deny the application and notify the applicant of his decision; provided, however, that if the only ground for such denial falls under subdivision (b) or (c) of this section, the commissioner may, in his discretion, waive such ground for denial and issue a certificate to the applicant if satisfied that in the particular case such subdivisions would be inapplicable or purely technical, and that the absence of these requirements would in no way interfere with the proper performance by the applicant of his duties as an investment counsel.

The commissioner may at any time temporarily suspend any investment counsel's certificate issued by him if he has reason to suspect the existence of any of the grounds, hereinabove enumerated, for the denial of an application for an investment counsel's certificate. If, at the expiration of sixty days from the date of such suspension, the certificate so suspended has not expired or has not been revoked, as hereinafter provided, it shall be deemed reinstated. The commissioner must revoke any investment counsel's certificate, if, after hearing upon notice, he shall find the existence of any of the grounds, hereinabove enumerated, for the denial of an application for an investment counsel's certificate; provided, however, that such revocation shall be discretionary with the commissioner if the only ground for such revocation falls under subdivision (b) or (c) of this section and he is satisfied that in the particular case such subdivisions would be inapplicable or purely technical, and that the absence of these requirements would in no way interfere with the proper performance by the applicant of his duties as an investment counsel.

SEC. 9. Section 10 of said act is hereby amended to read as follows:

SEC. 10. Any company which holds a permit from the commissioner authorizing the payment of a commission upon the sale of its securities, and which proposes to sell such securities through agents licensed under such permit, shall first file with the commissioner of corporations a good and sufficient bond for one thousand dollars, payable to the people of the State of California for the use and benefit of any interested person, executed by said applicant and by sufficient surety or sureties, and to be approved by the commissioner of corporations. Said bond shall be conditioned upon the strict compliance with the provisions of this act and of said permit, and the faithful and honest performance of all obligations and undertakings in the sale of said securities by said company, its agents and employees. Said bond shall be further conditioned upon the payment of all damages suffered by any person damaged or defrauded by reason of the violation of any of the provisions of this act or by reason of any fraud connected with or growing out of the sale of any such securities. Any person who sustains an injury covered by such bond, may, in addition to any other remedy that he may have, bring an action in his own name upon said bond for the recovery of any damages sustained by him. Upon such action being commenced the commissioner of corporations may, in his discretion, require the filing of a new bond, and immediately upon the recovery in any action on such bond, such company shall file a new bond, and upon failure to file the same within ten days in either case such failure shall constitute sufficient grounds for the suspension or revocation of such company's permit or permits.

SEC. 10. Section 11 of said act is hereby amended to read as follows:

SEC. 11. No person, partnership, association or corporation, shall issue, circulate, or publish any advertisement, pamphlet, prospectus, or circular, either written or printed or oral, by mail, telegraph, radio or otherwise, concerning any security offered, issued or sold by any company, that such person, partnership, association, or corporation desires or proposes to sell, until the company proposing to issue such security shall have first secured from the commissioner a permit authorizing it to issue or sell such security; nor shall any company, broker, or agent, or any other person, issue, circulate, or publish any advertisement, pamphlet, prospectus, or circular concerning any security sold or offered for sale by it, unless the name of the company together with the name of the president, a vice president or secretary of such company, or the broker, agent, or person issuing, circulating, or publishing the same shall be subscribed thereto, and a true copy thereof shall have been first filed in the office of the commissioner at least one day prior thereto; provided, however, that the filing of a copy of such advertisement, pamphlet, prospectus or circular, as herein provided, shall not be required in any case in which the commissioner shall have authorized or consented to the issuance, circulation or publication thereof; nor shall any company, broker or agent, or any other person, issue, circulate, or publish any such advertisement, pamphlet, prospectus, or circular after notice in writing given to it by the commissioner that, in his opinion, the same contains any statement that is false or misleading or otherwise likely to deceive a reader thereof.

SEC. 11. Section 12 of said act is hereby amended to read as follows:

SEC. 12. Every company authorized by the commissioner to sell securities shall at all times keep and maintain a complete set of books, records and accounts, and shall thereafter, at such times as it may be required by the commissioner, make and file in the office of the commissioner a report, setting forth, in such form as the commissioner may prescribe, the securities sold by it under the authority of any permit issued by him, the proceeds derived therefrom, the disposition of such proceeds, and such other information concerning its property, officers, or affairs, relating to or affecting the value of such securities, as the commissioner may require.

SEC. 12. Section 13 of said act is hereby amended to read as follows:

SEC. 13. Every broker shall, at such times as it may be required by the commissioner, make and file in the office of the commissioner a true and correct statement in such form and containing such data as the commissioner may require of the business of such broker.

SEC. 13. Section 14 of said act is hereby amended to read as follows:

SEC. 14. No broker shall sell or offer for sale any security as a part of or connected with its brokerage business after notice in writing given to it by the commissioner that in his opinion the sale thereof or the manner or method of sale thereof would be or is unfair, unjust or inequitable to the purchaser thereof, unless the commissioner shall subsequently in writing withdraw such objection to the sale thereof.

SEC. 14. Section 15 of said act is hereby amended to read as follows:

Sec. 15. All papers, documents, reports, and other instruments in writing filed with the commissioner under this act shall be open to public inspection; provided, that if, in his judgment, the public welfare or the welfare of any company, broker, or agent demands that any portion of such information be not made public, he may, in his discretion, withhold such information from public inspection for such time as in his judgment is necessary. The commissioner may at any time give, issue, or make public any information concerning any company or any contracts, stocks, bonds, or other securities sold or offered for sale within this state, if in his judgment the giving, issuing, or publishing of the same will be of public interest or advantage or will tend to prevent the fraudulent sale of such securities.

SEC. 15. Section 16 of said act is hereby amended to read as follows:

Sec. 16. Every order, decision, permit or other official act of the commissioner shall be subject to review, in accordance with the provisions of chapter one of title one of part three of the Code of Civil Procedure. Upon such review, the burden of proof shall lie upon the appellant, and the court shall receive and consider any pertinent evidence, whether oral or documentary, concerning the action of the commissioner under review, but shall be limited to a consideration and determination of the question whether there has been an abuse of discretion on the part of the commissioner in making such order, decision, or permit, or other official act.

SEC. 16. Section 17 of said act is hereby amended to read as follows:

Sec. 17. Every security issued by any company, without a permit of the commissioner authorizing the same then in effect, shall be void, and every security issued by any company, with the authorization of the commissioner but not in substantial conformity with such authorization, and all contracts, whether executed or executory, for the purchase thereof, shall be voidable at the election of the holder thereof, or purchaser thereunder, unless within ten days after written notice of such irregularity in the issuance of such security has been given to the commissioner, he shall issue a permit authorizing the issuance of such security as of the date and in the manner of its actual issuance, and the commissioner is hereby authorized in his discretion to issue such subsequent permit.

SEC. 17. Section 18 of said act is hereby amended to read as follows:

Sec. 18. Every company which shall directly or indirectly offer for sale, or negotiate for the sale of or sell, or issue, or cause to be issued any security contrary to the provisions of this act, or of the constitution of this state, or in nonconformity with a permit of the commissioner authorizing the same, or which applies the proceeds from the sale thereof, or any part thereof, to any purpose other than the purpose or purposes, if any, specified in such permit, or to any purpose specified in such permit in excess of any amount limited in such permit to be used for such purpose, shall be guilty of a public offense and shall be punishable by a fine not exceeding ten thousand dollars.

One-fiftieth of one per cent of such amount in excess of one hundred thousand dollars and not exceeding five hundred thousand dollars; and

One one-hundredth of one per cent of such amount in excess of five hundred thousand dollars.

(a) The value of such securities shall be deemed to be their par or face value unless the consideration for such securities is in excess of such par or face value, in which case the value will be deemed to be the amount of the consideration so received.

(b) Where the securities proposed to be issued have no nominal or par value, the value of such securities shall be deemed to be the price at which the company proposes to sell or issue the same, or the value, as alleged in the application, of the consideration (if other than money) to be received in exchange therefor; provided, however, until a new value shall have been established, that each share of no par value stock proposed to be issued shall be deemed to have a value equal to the value which has been established by previous sales for money or other property of other shares of the same class.

(c) Interim or voting trust certificates shall be deemed to have a value equal to the aggregate value of the securities to be represented by said interim or voting trust certificates.

(d) Rights, warrants or other certificates evidencing stockholders' rights to purchase additional securities shall be deemed to have a value equal to the difference between the selling price of the securities represented by such rights, warrants or other certificates and the market value of the securities so represented at the date of filing of application.

(e) Where an application is made to issue securities containing a provision entitling the holder or holders thereof to convert or exchange the same for a different class of securities the value of the securities to be so issued shall be deemed to be an amount equal to twice the amount of the consideration to be received for the securities containing the conversion or exchange provision.

2. For filing any application for a permit or other authority to make dividends, create debts, or to divide, withdraw, increase, reduce or pay to the stockholders, or any of them, the capital stock, or any part thereof, the same amount that would otherwise be chargeable or collectible if such application were for a permit to issue securities; provided, that in any such case the value shall be determined by the amount of dividends made, debts created, or capital stock divided, withdrawn, increased, reduced, or paid.

3. For filing any application for a broker's or an investment counsel's certificate, twenty-five dollars.

4. For filing any application for an agent's certificate, five dollars.

5. For any examination, audit, or investigation, ten dollars per day or fraction thereof, if made by the commissioner, or the actual amount of the salary or other compensation, not exceeding ten dollars per day, paid to any deputy or other employee of the commissioner, if made by a deputy or other employee, for each day or fraction thereof that such commissioner, deputy, or other employee shall necessarily be absent from his office for the purpose of making such examination, audit, or investigation, plus the actual amount of expenses reasonably incurred in the performance of such work.

6. For copies of papers and records not required to be certified or otherwise authenticated by the commissioner, ten cents for each folio.

7. For certified copies of official documents, orders and other papers filed in his office; for making and mailing copies of process served upon him under the provisions of section 18 of this act, and for transcript on appeal, fifteen cents for each folio and one dollar for each certificate under seal affixed thereto.

8. For certificate of service and mailing of process served upon the commissioner under the provisions of section 18 of this act, two dollars.

9. For filing any application for an amendment to an existing permit to issue securities, or for a permit to negotiate for the sale of securities or requesting the written consent of the commissioner to a proposed instrument amending, supplementing or abrogating any portion of any mortgage, deed of trust, indenture or other instrument under which bonds, debentures or other evidences of indebtedness are issued or secured, ten dollars.

No fees shall be charged or collected for copies of papers, records, or official documents furnished to public officers for use in their official capacity or for the reports of the commissioner in the ordinary course of distribution; but the commissioner may fix a reasonable charge for the publications issued under his authority.

All fees charged and collected under this section shall be paid at least once each week, accompanied by a detailed statement thereof, into the treasury of the state to the credit of a fund to be known as the "Corporation Commission Fund," which fund is hereby created.

All moneys which shall be paid into the state treasury and credited to the "Corporation Commission Appraisal Fund" are hereby appropriated to be used by the commissioner in carrying out the provisions of this section; and the controller shall draw his warrant on said fund from time to time in favor of the commissioner for the amounts expended under his direction, and the treasury shall pay the same.

estate may be redeemed, for the additional periods of one year each, by paying to the county treasurer of the county wherein said real estate may be situated the following amounts for the following periods, respectively: (1) for extending the period of redemption for the first period of one year, by paying to the county treasurer a sum of money equal to the amount of the taxes, penalties for delinquency and costs thereon for which said real estate was originally sold to the state together with a sum equal to interest thereon at the rate of seven per cent per annum; (2) for extending the period of redemption for each additional year thereafter, by paying to the county treasurer a sum of money equal to the taxes, penalties for delinquency and costs thereon for each of the second, third, and/or fourth years of delinquency, respectively, together with a sum equal to the interest thereon at the rate of seven per cent per annum.

A receipt shall be given by the county treasurer to the person so paying said amounts, evidencing payments as compensation for the use and occupancy of said real estate and to be applied as a credit if, when and as redemption is made, as in this subdivision hereinafter provided.

Such payments shall not be deemed a redemption of such real estate nor affect the right, title, or interest in the state thereto, but shall postpone, for the period or periods aforesaid, the time when said real estate shall be deemed to or may be disposed of by the state and the moneys so paid shall be deemed and considered as compensation for the use and occupancy of said real estate; provided, however, that if redemption shall thereafter be made as hereinabove in subdivision (a) of this section provided, the amounts so paid to extend said periods of redemption shall be credited on the amounts to be paid for such redemption.

Sec. 2. Sec. 2. Section 32a of said act is hereby amended to read as follows:

Sec. 32a. The board of directors of any irrigation district organized under or subject to the provisions of this act may as hereinafter provided cause funding or refunding bonds to be issued for the purpose of funding or refunding any or all outstanding bonds of the district. Such refunding or refunding bonds shall, except as otherwise provided herein, be issued in substantially the manner and form prescribed by this act for the issuance of other bonds of irrigation districts, and the provisions of this act and of the act creating the California bond certification commission concerning the authorization, certification, issuance and sale of bonds of irrigation districts shall be applicable to bonds issued under this section; provided, however, that no survey, examination, drawing, plan, estimate or report of the California bond certification commission as provided in sections 30, 30a, and 30b hereof shall be required to be made, nor shall any resolution of the board of directors that the proposed plan of works is satisfactory as prescribed by section 30b hereof be required to be adopted, but in lieu thereof the board of directors of any district desiring to fund or refund any of its bonds may submit to the California bond certification commission its proposed plan for funding or refunding such bonds. The board of directors of any district may make such expenditures or, with the approval of the California bond certification commission, may incur indebtedness, and issue warrants therefor, for the purpose of paying the cost and expenses of effecting any such funding or refunding. If such plan is approved by said commission, the board of directors of such district may call an election for the purpose of authorizing the issuance of such funding or refunding bonds. Such election shall be called and held and the result thereof determined and declared substantially in the same manner as provided by this act for the issuance of other bonds of such district, except that a majority vote only shall be required for the authorization of such refunding bonds. The maturity or maturities of said funding or refunding bonds shall be fixed by the board of directors of such district subject to the approval of the California bond certification commission, but in no case shall the maturity of any of said bonds be more than fifty years from the date thereof.

Any issue of such funding or refunding bonds may, in the discretion of the board of directors, mature serially or at one time, but if any issue of such bonds shall mature at one time the board of directors prior to or at the time of the issuance of such bonds shall provide for the creation of an annual sinking fund for the payment of such bonds in such amount as may be determined by the board of directors with the approval of the California bond certification commission; and the board of directors, except as herein otherwise provided, shall each year at the same time and in the same manner as other assessments in the district are levied and collected, levy and collect an assessment upon all of the lands in the district, in addition to all other assessments in this act required or permitted to be levied and collected, sufficient to provide the amount of such sinking fund payment for the then current year; provided, further, that the amount of such sinking fund assessment may be modified from time to time by the board of directors with the approval of the California bond certification commission. Whenever such sinking fund shall contain at least ten thousand dollars, the board of directors shall by notice published at least once a week for three successive weeks in some newspaper published in the county where the office of the district is located, and, in its discretion, in any other newspaper or newspapers, invite sealed proposals for the sale to the district of any of its outstanding funding or refunding bonds, for the payment of which such sinking fund was created. Said notice shall state the amount available for the redemption of such bonds and shall specify the time and place when such proposals will be opened. All such proposals shall be opened by the board of directors in open meeting at the time specified in said notice or at some subsequent time to which such meeting shall be adjourned. Any or all of such proposals may be rejected, in the discretion of the board of directors. If no bids are received, or those received are rejected, the board of directors may purchase any of said bonds at private sale at not exceeding the lowest price set forth in any such proposal or proposals. No proposal to sell bonds to the district at a price in excess of the par value thereof shall be accepted. All bonds so purchased from sinking fund moneys shall be forthwith canceled. The board of directors may invest any money in the sinking fund in bonds of the United States or of the State of California and shall hold the bonds so purchased as part of the sinking fund until such time as the board of directors may determine that it is for the best interests of the district that such bonds or any of them be sold. The proceeds of sale of any bonds in which any part of said sinking fund shall be invested shall be deposited in the sinking fund.

The board of directors may, with the approval of the California bond certification commission, provide for the call and redemption of any of its funding or refunding bonds, in numerical order, or by lot, on any interest payment date prior to their fixed maturity, at not exceeding the par value thereof and accrued interest, in which event a statement to that effect shall be set forth in the face of the bond. Notice of such redemption shall be published once a week for three successive weeks in a newspaper of general circulation printed and published within the county in which the office of the board of directors is located, the first publication of which shall be at least thirty days prior to the date fixed for such redemption. After the date fixed for such redemption, if the district shall have provided funds available for the payment of the principal and interest of the bonds so called, interest on said bonds thereafter shall cease.

Notwithstanding anything to the contrary herein contained, the board of directors shall not be required to levy any such assessment for said sinking fund for said current year if the district shall have on hand surplus funds from other sources available for said sinking fund payment and shall have deposited the same in said sinking fund.

Any funding or refunding bonds herein provided for may be sold from time to time in the same manner as other bonds of the district, or, may be exchanged for such other bonds of the district upon such terms and conditions as may be approved by the California bond certification commission. Any such outstanding bonds so funded or refunded or exchanged shall be immediately canceled by the treasurer.

Notwithstanding anything to the contrary in this act contained, if in the judgment of the board of directors it is desirable that the principal or interest, or any part thereof, on any funding or refunding bonds of the district hereafter issued shall not be payable from assessments to be levied by the district, but shall be payable wholly or in part from the proceeds, or any thereof, of any designated or proposed contract or contracts of the district for the sale of water or electricity or otherwise, the board of directors may, with the approval of the California bond certification commission, so provide, and in such case the proceeds of any such contract or contracts, or any part thereof, shall by resolution of the board of directors be allocated to the payment of the principal or interest, or any part thereof, of any funding or refunding bonds of the district, and such allocation shall be irrevocable until all of such funding or refunding bonds and their appurtenant coupons shall have been fully paid and discharged.

The district may also, with the approval of said commission, designate any bank or trust company in this state to act as paying agent of the principal and interest of its funding or refunding bonds and to receive the payments under any contract or contracts for the sale of water or electricity and to apply such payments to the payment of the principal and interest of its bonds payable therefrom; and the district, with the consent of said commission, may from time to time change such paying agent."

1100. When two or more heirs, devisees or legatees are entitled to the distribution of undivided interests in any real or personal property of the decedent and they have not agreed among themselves, before distribution, to a partition, allotment or other division thereof, any one or more of them, or the executor or administrator, at the request of any one or more of them, may petition the court to make such partition, allotment or division of the property as will be equitable and will avoid the distribution of undivided interests.

1101. Such petition may be filed with the clerk at any time after the time to file or present claims has expired, and before the distribution of the property to be affected has been ordered. It shall describe the property and give the names of the persons having or claiming the undivided interests and shall state what those interests are, so far as known to the petitioner. Thereupon a citation shall be issued by the clerk directed to the persons, other than the petitioner, who are entitled to distribution of the undivided interests, and to the executor or administrator, directing them to answer the petition within thirty days after service of the citation. The citation shall be served personally or by publication in the same manner as a summons in a civil action. If there is unreasonable delay in serving the citation, the court may dismiss the proceeding.

1102. When all the persons in interest have appeared or are in default, the clerk shall set the matter for hearing by the court. The persons in interest who have filed written appearances shall be considered the parties to the proceeding, and each shall be entitled to five days' notice of the hearing. No one shall be considered as a plaintiff or as a defendant.

1103. The court shall proceed to take evidence and to partition, allot and divide the property so that each party shall receive property of a value proportionate to his interest in the whole, and for that purpose it may direct the executor or administrator to sell any property which can not be partitioned without great prejudice to the owners and which can not conveniently be allotted to any one party. The sale shall be conducted and confirmed in the same manner as other probate sales. Any two or more parties may agree to accept undivided interests.

1104. The court, in its discretion, may appoint one or three referees to partition property capable of being partitioned, if requested to do so by any party in interest. The number of referees appointed must conform to the request of at least one of the parties. The referees shall have the powers and perform the duties of referees in civil actions for partition, and the court shall have the same powers with respect to their report as in such actions.

1105. The expenses of such partition shall be equitably apportioned by the court among the parties, but each party must pay his own attorney's fees. The amount charged to each party shall constitute a lien on the property allotted to him.

1106. The allotment made by the court shall control upon proceedings for distribution, unless modified for good cause upon reasonable notice, and the proceedings leading to such allotment may be reviewed upon appeal from the decree of distribution."

REMARKS BY SENATOR SLATER.

Senator Slater addressed the Senate as follows:

MR. PRESIDENT AND GENTLEMEN OF THE SENATE: A signal honor has come both to the Senate of the State of California and to one of its distinguished members. Official word has been received from the national capital that President Herbert C. Hoover has named Senator Sanborn Young as one of four representatives of the United States to the International Opium Conference to be held in Geneva in May. As members of the Senate, we are unquestionably very happy. The appointment of Senator Young is a fine tribute to the untiring service he has rendered the world in his endeavor to stop the narcotic traffic and its baneful influence upon mankind. The service Senator Young has rendered has placed him in the foreground, and his efforts and accomplishments have gained him national recognition. He has spent not only much valuable time but his own money in his research, which has already demonstrated its great value in the crusade to effectually stamp out the evils resulting from the production, distribution and use of narcotics. The recognition given him in his selection by the President of the United States, is sincerely appreciated by his colleagues in the Senate of the State of California, who recognize in him a man imbued with the utmost sincerity in all his endeavors. We congratulate him, as we do the great cause in which he has worked, on his appointment to the Geneva Conference, which is destined to be outstanding in its importance.

REPLY BY SENATOR YOUNG.

In reply to Senator Slater's remarks Senator Young addressed the Senate as follows:

MR. PRESIDENT AND GENTLEMEN OF THE SENATE: I am deeply grateful to you, Senator Slater, and to all of the members of the Senate for your generous tribute to our narcotic work. I am also deeply grateful to Senator Jones and to Lieutenant Governor Merriam for the tribute paid our narcotic work last January which was published in the Journal and in the press and was brought to the attention of the nation.

I am very proud and very humble—proud of the distinguished honor conferred upon me, and humble because of the grave responsibility which it carries. I realize that this is not a personal matter, but one involving a great principle. It is not for myself personally, but for the great crusade in which we are enrolled.

May I again express my deep appreciation to every member of the Senate and to all those who have aided in the accomplishments thus far realized which have made California the foremost state of the Union in its splendid handling of narcotic legislation.

Senator Maloney accepted the shillalah presented by Senator Treacy, and being called upon by the President of the Senate to deliver an address in commemoration of St. Patrick, delivered the following address to the Senate in commemoration of St. Patrick:

ADDRESS OF SENATOR THOMAS A. MALONEY.

MR. PRESIDENT AND GENTLEMEN OF THE SENATE: I appreciate your kindness, Mr. President, for calling on me this day to speak in commemoration of the patron saint of Ireland, St. Patrick. I must confess, however, to you, gentlemen of the Senate, that I, along with seventeen other brothers and sisters, twelve of whom are now living, was born in this great State of California; but my dear father and mother, whom I owe so much to, were born near the city of Dublin, County Kildare, so therefore whatever I may say here today about St. Patrick is what I have learned through Irish parents and those of Irish parentage, whom on many occasions I have had the pleasure to associate with.

Today throughout the entire world the Feast of St. Patrick is celebrated. To my knowledge, and as near as I can learn, there is a question just where St. Patrick was born. I am positively sure, however, that his ancestors were French. History informs us that Patrick died when he was 100 years old in the year 473, which would indicate he was born in the year 373.

In the year 385 St. Patrick was captured by the Irish Kelts who at that time invaded England. In the darkness of the night he escaped and made his way to Galway Bay and embarked to return home to his own people in France. After years of study, Patrick was commissioned to go to Ireland and Christianize the Irish people, who were at that time suffering persecution by the Druid priests. His task was hard and his trials and tribulations many. His home was the mountainside, his clothes were made of wool from sheep, and for a pillow he used a hard stone, and all to fulfill his mission in Ireland to Christianize this persecuted race and help to relieve the many hardships they were enduring at that time.

From the hills of Tara, Patrick could see the feast of the Druid priests being celebrated, and knowing well in his heart that during this celebration no fires were permitted, he disobeyed this rule and made a fire on the hillside. The king, seeing the fire, ordered the culprit, Patrick, brought in, which was done, and upon questioning by the king, Patrick was asked whom he represented, and he stated, the Holy Trinity, explaining to the king just who the Holy Trinity were. Patrick converted the king and his wife and those at the feast, and was then given permission to preach to the Irish people, which he did, and did well, for it was not long after that monasteries and churches were built in Ireland to carry on his work, and which to this day is carried on by the Irish people.

In the seventh century, Alaric conquered Rome and destroyed the Roman Empire, and it was at that time that the Middle or Dark Ages began and lasted until the twelfth century. When the civilization of the world was destroyed by the German invasion of the Roman Empire, it was the civilized Ireland, educated by Patrick, whose teachings brought back education and civilization to the entire world and has to this day advanced its educational facilities to the high standards that it now enjoys. In those days with the very fervent kiss of a loving mother on the cheek of her child, the respect was instilled into the hearts of the children of Ireland, and this respect has to this day played its most important part in bringing the highest standards of decency and education throughout the entire world. The Irish people who came to America have contributed to this country loyalty and good citizenship, and in all the important walks of life in this great United States, the sons and daughters and those of Irish parentage show their allegiance to the American Flag. Although persecuted to the very depths of persecution, Irish mothers shared equally the hardships endured by those who were struggling in this fight for independence.

The strong attributes displayed by Patrick instilled into the hearts and the minds of the Irish people determination and courage, and that determination and courage has played its most important part in the building up not only of Ireland but nearly all of the nations of the world, because no matter where you may go, you will find Irish people.

Ireland, through the efforts of St. Patrick, has more than contributed its share to this nation, not only on the battlefields, when this country was at war, but on all other occasions when her sons and daughters were called upon. If we trace back our history just a little we will find that General Montgomery, a son of Ireland, took part in the Revolutionary War; that Admiral Barry, another son of Ireland, was the first Admiral of the American Navy, and in the Civil War, Thomas Francis Mahan was commander of the Irish Brigade.

In closing, on behalf of the Irish people of the State of California, I wish to extend to the members of this Senate my sincere thanks and appreciation for the courtesy shown, in granting me the privilege of expressing to you the gratitude of the Irish people, and their descendants.

"SEC. 8. A new section is hereby added to the Political Code of the State of California, to be numbered 3480b and to read as follows:

3480b. Whenever any district has outstanding more than one issue of bonds it may refund said bonds by a single issue of bonds as in this section provided. To refund said bonds hereunder, the trustees, subject to the provisions hereof, shall make a contract with three or more bondholders, or their duly authorized representatives, acting on behalf of all bondholders who shall become parties to the contract, wherein the terms for such refunding shall be set forth. The contract shall provide (1) for the issuance of refunding bonds hereunder and for the maturities of the refunding bonds, which, however, must all mature within fifty years from the date when authorized by the election herein provided; (2) for the interest rate on said refunding bonds which may be made to vary from time to time or may be omitted for a time but which shall not exceed six per cent per annum, payable semiannually; (3) for the deposit with the county treasurer of the bonds to be refunded and for the time within which said deposit shall take place; (4) for extension of time for deposit of said bonds, but the total time allowed for deposit thereof shall not exceed one year from the date of the election herein provided; (5) for application of moneys on hand in the bond funds of the district or to be received therefrom from any source; (6) for the amount of refunding bonds to be issued and for the exchange thereof for bonds being refunded either on a pro rata or bond for bond basis; (7) and for such other things incidental to the process of refunding said bonds and not inconsistent herewith as may be proper or necessary. Said contract may include for refunding any outstanding warrants of the district. Bonds and coupons may be refunded whether in default or not in default. Except as herein specially provided, said refunding bonds shall be in terms substantially as provided in section 3480a, as said section shall be when this section shall go into effect as law; but they shall state that they are issued under this section. Upon the execution of said contract the trustees shall call an election in the district and shall submit to the electors the question whether or not refunding bonds shall be issued as provided by said contract. In the notices of election the terms of the contract shall be generally described. All proceedings appertaining to said election shall be in accordance with section 3480. If the majority of votes cast at said election shall be in favor of said proposition, said contract shall become binding according to its terms. Whenever bonds, or bonds and warrants, have been fully deposited, as required by said contract, then (1) moneys in the bond funds of the district shall be used, as specified by said contract either (a) in pro rata part payment of bonds and coupons for payment of which they were collected or (b) in payment of bonds and coupons at maturity where the holders thereof do not become parties to said contract, (2) lands that have been deeded under sales for delinquencies and are held for the benefit of bondholders shall be sold for cash at such prices as the trustees shall specify and moneys realized from the sale of said lands shall go into said bond funds of the district, and (3) after all of said lands have been sold, the trustees shall proceed, as provided in sections 3456a, 3461, 3462 and 3463 to have an assessment levied in the amount of the refunding bonds authorized. Said assessment shall be security for the payment of said refunding bonds and shall be collected and applied for that purpose in the manner prescribed in section 3480. Whenever the assessment roll for said assessment has been filed in the office of the county treasurer all assessments underlying the bond issues being refunded shall be null and void and no further proceedings shall be taken thereunder; provided, however, that deeds shall issue thereafter on any sales thereunder for delinquencies where the times for issue of said deeds have then already expired, or where said sales have been made to purchasers for cash and the times for redemption have not yet expired. Upon the filing of said assessment roll in the office of the county treasurer the trustees shall proceed to carry out said contract. Additional moneys for said bond funds for application under said contract may be provided by voluntary contribution and refunding bonds may be issued therefor. Unless funds are provided in the county treasury in the manner herein specified to pay at maturity any bonds and coupons which are not deposited under said contract the trustees shall not carry out said contract. The county treasurer, as depositary of bonds hereunder, may keep said bonds in any safe deposit boxes or vaults in any banks that he shall select. Nothing herein contained shall be held to affect or restrict the provisions of section 3480a. Except as any thereof cannot be applied hereunder or is inconsistent herewith, the provisions of section 3480, as said section shall be when this section shall go into effect as law, are hereby incorporated herein as a part of this section and made applicable to said assessment and to said refunding bonds.

SEC. 9. A new section is hereby added to the Political Code to be numbered 3457b and to read as follows:

3457b. Whenever there is sufficient money in the hands of the county treasurer applicable to the payment of any outstanding warrants of the district, and such warrants have not been theretofore presented for payment, the county treasurer may give notice by one publication in some newspaper of general circulation published in the county that there is money in his hands to pay certain warrants, giving their numbers in the order of their registration and stating that at midnight of the date of said publication the warrants therein mentioned shall cease to bear interest. Thereafter interest on such warrants shall cease, as set forth in said notice."

SECOND READING OF SENATE BILLS—(OUT OF ORDER).

Senate Bill No. 533—An act to amend subdivision (c) of section 11 of the Workmen's Compensation, Insurance and Safety Act of 1917, as amended, with respect to limitations of time for instituting proceedings for the collection from an employer of additional compensation.

COMMITTEE AMENDMENTS.

During the second reading of the bill, the following committee amendments were offered:

AMENDMENT NUMBER ONE.

In line 1 of the title of the printed bill, strike out the following: "subdivision (c) of".

Amendment adopted.

AMENDMENT NUMBER TWO.

On page 1 of the printed bill, strike out lines 1 to 25, inclusive, and insert in lieu thereof, the following:

"SECTION 1. Section 11 of the workmen's compensation, insurance and safety act of 1917, as amended, is hereby amended to read as follows:

Sec. 11. (a) Unless compensation is paid or an agreement for its payment made within the time limited in this section for the institution of proceedings for its collection, the right to institute such proceedings shall be barred; provided, that the filing of an application with the commission for any portion of the benefits prescribed by this act shall render this section inoperative as to all further claims of any person or persons for compensation arising from the same transaction, and the right to present such further claims shall be governed by the provisions of section 20 (d) and section 65 (b) of this act.

(b) The periods within which proceedings for the collection of compensation may be commenced are as follows:

(1) Proceedings for the collection of the benefit provided by subsection (a) of section 9 or for the collection of the disability payment provided by subsection (b) of said section 9 must be commenced within six months from the date of the injury, except as otherwise provided in this act; except that where in the beginning the effects of an injury are latent, and no disability or incapacity is apparent, but disability later results therefrom, the period within which proceedings for collection of disability payment may be commenced shall be extended six months from the date of discovery of the disability.

(2) Proceedings for the collection of the death benefit provided by subsection (c) of said section 9 must be commenced within one year from the date of death, and in any event within two hundred forty weeks from the date of the injury, and can only be maintained when it appears that death ensued within one year from the date of the injury, or that the injury causing death also caused disability which continued to the date of the death and for which a disability payment was made, or proceedings for its collection commenced within the time limited for the commencement of proceedings for the recovery of the disability payment.

(c) The payment of compensation, or any part thereof, or agreement therefor, shall have the effect of extending the period within which proceedings for its collection may be commenced, six months from the date of the agreement or last payment of such compensation, or any part thereof, or the expiration of the period covered by any such payment; but no payment of such compensation, or agreement therefor, by an insurance carrier shall extend the period within which proceedings for the collection from an employer of the additional compensation under the provisions of section 6 (b) hereof may be commenced; provided, however, that nothing contained in this section shall be construed to bar the right of any injured employee to institute proceedings for the collection of compensation within two hundred forty-five weeks after the date of the injury upon the grounds that the original injury has caused new and further disability; and the jurisdiction of the commission, in such cases, shall be a continuing jurisdiction at all times within such period; provided, further, that the provisions of this section shall not apply to an employee who is totally disabled and bedridden as a result of his injury, during the continuance of such condition or until the expiration of six months thereafter.

(d) If an injured employee, or in the case of his death, one or more of his dependents, shall be under twenty-one years of age or incompetent at any time when any right or privilege accrues to such person under the provisions of this act, a general guardian, appointed by the court, or a guardian ad litem or trustee appointed by the commission or a commissioner may, on behalf of any such person, claim and exercise any such right or privilege with the same force and effect as if no such disability existed; and no limitation of time provided by this act shall run against any such person under twenty-one years of age or incompetent unless and until such guardian or trustee is appointed. The commission shall have power to determine the fact of the minority or incompetency of any injured employee and may appoint a trustee to receive and disburse compensation payments for the benefit of such minor or incompetent and his family.

(e) No compensation shall be payable in case of the death or disability of an employee if his death is caused, or if and so far as his disability is caused, continued, or aggravated, by an unreasonable refusal to submit to medical treatment, or to any surgical treatment, the risk of which is, in the opinion of the commission, based upon expert medical or surgical advice, inconsiderable in view of the seriousness of the injury.

(f) The fact that an employee has suffered a previous disability, or receives compensation therefor, shall not preclude him from compensation for a later injury, or his dependents from compensation for death resulting therefrom, but in determining compensation for the later injury or death resulting therefrom, his average annual earnings shall be fixed at such sum as will reasonably represent his annual earning capacity at the time of the later injury.

(g) Any payment, allowance or benefit received by the injured employee during the period of his incapacity, or by his dependents in the event of his death, which by the terms of this act was not then due and payable or when there is any dispute or question concerning the right to compensation, shall not, in the absence of any agreement, be construed to be an admission of liability for compensation on the part of the employer, or the acceptance thereof as a waiver of any right or claim which the employee or his dependents may have against the employer, but any such payment, allowance or benefit may be taken into account by the commission in fixing the amount of the compensation to be paid.

(h) The running of the period of limitations prescribed by this section is an affirmative defense and operates to bar the remedy and not to extinguish the right of the employee. It may be waived, and failure to present such defense prior to the submission of the cause for decision shall be a sufficient waiver."

Amendment adopted.

Bill read second time, ordered to print, and re-referred to Committee on Judiciary.

Senate Bill No. 554—An act to amend subdivision (d) of section 20¹ of the Workmen's Compensation, Insurance and Safety Act of 1917, as amended, by permitting decision on rehearing after 245 weeks from date of injury.

Sec. 20. (a) After final hearing by the commission, it shall, within thirty days, make and file (1) its findings upon all facts involved in the controversy and (2) its award which shall state its determination as to the rights of the parties.

(b) The commission in its award may fix and determine the total amount of compensation to be paid and specify the manner of payment, or may fix and determine the weekly disability payment to be made and order payment thereof during the continuance of such disability.

(c) If, in any proceeding under section 6 to 31, inclusive, of this act, it is proved that an injury has been suffered for which the employer would be liable to pay compensation if disability had resulted therefrom, but it is not proved that any incapacity had resulted, the commission may, instead of dismissing the application, award a nominal disability indemnity, if it appears that disability is likely to result at a future time.

(d) The commission shall have continuing jurisdiction over all its orders, decisions and awards made and entered under the provisions of section 6 to 31, inclusive, of this act and may at any time, upon notice, and after opportunity to be heard is given to the parties in interest, rescind, alter or amend any such order, decision or award made by it upon good cause appearing therefor, such power including the right to review, grant or regrant, diminish, increase or terminate, within the limits prescribed by this act, any compensation awarded, upon the grounds that the disability of the person in whose favor such award was made has either recurred, increased, diminished or terminated: provided, that no award of compensation shall be rescinded, altered or amended except upon petition therefor in writing filed with the commission within two hundred forty-five weeks from the date of the injury, and the order, decision, or award rescinding, altering or amending the prior award shall be subject to petition for rehearing and to review by the courts as hereinafter provided in this act. Any order, decision or award rescinding, altering or amending a prior order,

Sec. 27. (a) No contract, rule or regulation shall exempt the employer from liability for the compensation fixed by this act, but nothing in this act contained shall be construed as impairing the right of the parties interested to compromise, subject to the provisions herein contained, any liability which may be claimed to exist under this act on account of such injury or death, or as conferring upon the dependents of any injured employee any interest which such employee may not divert by such compromise or for which he, or his estate, shall, in the event of such compromise by him, be accountable to such dependents or any of them.

(b) The compensation herein provided shall be the measure of the responsibility which the employer has assumed for injuries or death that may occur to employees in his employment when subject to the provisions of this act, and no release of liability or compromise agreement shall be valid unless it provide for the payment of full compensation in accordance with the provisions of this act or unless it shall be approved by the commission.

(c) A copy of such release or compromise agreement signed by both parties shall forthwith be filed with the commission. When such release or compromise agreement is filed with the commission and approved by it, the commission may of its own motion, or on the application of either party, without notice, enter its award based upon such release or compromise agreement.

"SECTION 1. Section 64 of the workmen's compensation, insurance and safety act of 1917, as amended, is hereby amended to read as follows:

Sec. 64. (a) Any party or person aggrieved directly or indirectly by any final order decision, award, rule or regulation of the commission, made or entered under any provision contained in this act, may apply to the commission for a rehearing in respect to any matters determined or covered by such final order, decision, award, rule or regulation and specified in the application for rehearing within the time and in the manner hereinafter specified, and not otherwise; provided, that each party to a proceeding shall be entitled to petition for a rehearing and to decision thereon.

(b) No cause of action arising out of any such final order, decision or award shall accrue in any court to any person until and unless such person shall have made application for such rehearing, and such application shall have been granted or denied; provided, that nothing herein contained shall be construed to prevent the enforcement of any such final order, decision, award, rule or regulation in the manner provided in this act.

(c) Such application shall set forth specifically and in full detail the grounds upon which the applicant considers said final order, decision, award, rule or regulation is unjust or unlawful, and every issue to be considered by the commission. Such application must be verified upon oath in the same manner as required for verified pleadings in courts of record and must contain a general statement of any evidence or other matters upon which the applicant relies in support thereof. The applicant for such hearing shall be deemed to have finally waived all objections, irregularities and illegalities concerning the matter upon which such rehearing is sought other than those set forth in the application for such rehearing.

(d) A copy of such application for rehearing shall be served forthwith upon all adverse parties by the party applying for such rehearing, and any such adverse party may file an answer thereto within ten days thereafter. Such answer must likewise be verified. The commission may require the application for rehearing to be served on such other persons or parties as may be designated by it.

(e) Upon filing of an application for a rehearing, if the issues raised thereby have theretofore been adequately considered by the commission, it may determine the same by confirming without hearing its previous determination, or if a rehearing is necessary to determine the issues raised, or any one or more of such issues, the commission shall order a rehearing thereon and consider and determine the matter or matters raised by such application. If at the time of granting such rehearing it shall appear to the satisfaction of the commission that no sufficient reason exists for taking further testimony, the commission may reconsider and redetermine the original cause without setting a time and place for such further rehearing. Notice of the time and place of such hearing, if any, shall be given to the applicant and adverse parties, and to such other persons as the commission may order.

(f) If after such rehearing and a consideration of all the facts including those arising since the making of the order, decision or award involved, the commission shall be of the opinion that the original order, decision or award, or any part thereof, is in any respect, unjust or unwarranted, or should be changed, the commission may abrogate, change or modify the same. An order, decision or award made after such rehearing, abrogating, changing or modifying the original order, decision or award, shall have the same force and effect as an original order, decision or award, but shall not effect any right or the enforcement of any right arising from or by virtue of the original order, decision or award, unless so ordered by the commission. An application for a rehearing shall be deemed to have been denied by the commission unless it shall have been acted upon within thirty days from the date of filing; provided, however, that the commission may, upon good cause being shown therefor, extend the time within which it may act upon such application for not exceeding thirty days.

PROCEEDINGS UNDER CALL OF THE SENATE.
COMMUNICATION.

The following communication was presented, and on motion of Senator Inman, ordered read, and printed in the Journal.

LOS ANGELES, CALIFORNIA, March 17, 1931.

U. A. Jones, Hotel Senator, Sacramento, California.

(Following lead editorial printed Wednesday. For just reapportionment.)

The Craig bill reported out by the Assembly Committee on Reapportionment obviously is the result of an effort to compromise the differences between northern and southern California as to the manner in which this State's delegation to the Lower House in Washington shall be divided. Of the 20 congressmen to which California is entitled under the 1930 census the bill provides that ten shall be chosen from the north and ten from the south.

To accomplish this, the committee has divided the north, along county lines, into ten districts, of which the average population is 257,615 and the south similarly, except that here the population of the average district is 310,112. The three districts comprising San Francisco and San Mateo counties have an average population of 237,138 each and the two formed of Alameda County 237,191, while the seven formed from Los Angeles County have an average population each of 315,498. Further, the total population of the ten northern districts, aggregated, is 2,576,143, and that of the southern ten, 3,101,118.

The inequity of the division and its failure to observe the constitutional provision that reapportionment shall be made in proportion to population is too obvious to require comment. Inspection of the totals shows further that the excess of population in the ten southern districts over those of the north is 524,975, or nearly twice the number established as the population basis per congressman, which is 283,862.

In other words, reapportionment according to the law would give to southern California at least eleven congressmen and to northern California no more than nine.

If there is anything which is thoroughly established as a result of southern California's ten-year fight for just representation in the State and national Legislatures, it is that reapportionment shall and must conform to the law and the constitution. The California State Chamber of Commerce, representing every part of the State, on December 5th, last, officially declared through the unanimous action of its directorate for reapportionment of congressional representation "in accordance with the provisions of the constitution of the United States" and "at the earliest possible moment." Governor Rolph is pledged to constitutional reapportionment and the leaders of both houses at Sacramento have agreed to it, at least in principle. By no significant element of any part of the State, save perhaps a few northern politicians long held balance of power, is its justice and pressing importance denied.

Why then should southern California consent to accept less than its due? It is true that, in defense of the ten-ten division, it is argued that the law provides that congressional districts must follow county lines and that, under this restriction, it is impossible to form them in such a way that the population of each shall be exactly or even closely approximating the official base number of 283,862. But this explanation falls far short of making clear why such necessary differentials should be so greatly to the advantage of the north and to the disadvantage of the south. The former's average district is 26,247 below the base number; the latter's 26,250 above it. The average San Francisco Bay district, under the proposed bill, is 46,724 persons short of the number required for each congressman; the average Los Angeles County district has 31,636 more persons each than the required number.

The plea is further made that, in order to give southern California the eleven congressmen to which, as a minimum, she is entitled, it would be necessary to assign eight congressmen to Los Angeles County and that, on the 283,862-per-congressman basis, this county is entitled to only 7.78. As a matter of fact, making eight congress districts from Los Angeles County would give each district an average population of 276,061 persons, which average is 38,923 more than the average of each San Francisco district as allocated under the Craig bill.

It is declared that the ten-ten basis is the least which northern members of the Legislature will accept and that, if this is refused, they will block any reapportionment bill at all and will force the election of California's nine new congressmen at large; that is, from the State as a whole and from no particular districts. Votes enough to do this are claimed; whether they can be delivered in the face of the plain and just facts remains to be seen.

There is little to recommend the at-large system of electing congressmen and some affect to fear that, under this system, southern California might get even fewer congressmen than the north is now willing to concede her. This also remains to be seen; at least, it will be time enough to cross that bridge when we get to it. The many inequities from which this area has suffered in the past are gradually teaching us political solidarity and when southern California does learn to vote as a unit she has the ballots to get her dues.

Her rights are all southern California seeks. She wants no more; she should not be content with less.

Thereupon the department of public works of the State of California shall consider the report so filed and may with respect to said contribution reject the request for such contribution or approve the same, and may reject or approve the said report in whole or in part, or may suggest modifications thereof. The said department of public works shall through its proper officers, boards or commissions, pass upon the said request for contribution and the said report within sixty (60) days after the receipt of any such report by the said director of public works. Upon receipt of said report the several boards of supervisors shall forthwith consider the same and shall within sixty (60) days after receipt of the same, by resolution adopt or reject the said report. Failure of any board of supervisors to so act within said time shall be deemed a rejection, but such rejection or a rejection by other means shall be without prejudice to the submission of a new or amended report by the board of directors of the district at any time. Each board of supervisors shall cause a certified copy of its resolution adopting or rejecting said report to be sent to the secretary of the board of directors of the district.

Sec. 15. Limit on obligation of counties and state. No county within any district organized under the provisions of this act shall be obligated or committed hereunder unless and until the board of supervisors thereof shall have approved the report of the board of directors of the district provided for in section 12 hereof and unless and until said report shall have been approved by the boards of supervisors of all other counties in the district. Upon the adoption of the final surveys, plans, specifications and detailed drawings by the board of directors, a certified copy thereof shall be transmitted to the director of public works of the State of California for his approval.

Sec. 17. Construction work by public contract. All construction work under the provisions of this act shall be done by contract let and awarded to the lowest regular responsible bidder upon the same after advertisement for bids therefor shall have first been made by publication twice in a newspaper of general circulation published and circulated within the district. All bids other than the lowest regular acceptable bid of a responsible bidder shall be rejected by the board of directors.

Sec. 18. Contracts and bonds. The bidder to whom any contract is awarded under the provisions of this act shall execute a contract in a form approved by the attorney for the district within twenty (20) days after the date of the award of such contract by the board of directors. Before being entitled to a contract the successful bidder shall execute bonds for the faithful performance of the contract and for the payment of all claims for labor and material thereunder in the manner provided by law and in the form approved by the attorney for the district. All of said bonds shall be executed by the bidder and by a corporate surety duly authorized to do business as such under the laws of the State of California and in amounts which shall not be less than fifty per cent (50%) of the aggregate contract price for each bond. All contract bonds furnished as provided in this section in addition to the other requirements herein provided shall be approved by the president of the board of directors of the district and the district engineer prior to the execution of contract in behalf of the district. A levy shall be made within and upon the several counties composing any joint highway district organized under the provisions of this act to provide for the payment of the costs and expenses of any acquisitions of property or rights of way, construction or improvement under the provisions hereof. The board of directors of any district is empowered to make such levy as herein-after provided. Said board of directors shall adopt a resolution setting forth in general terms the project or portion thereof, to defray the costs and expenses of which the proposed levy is to be made and giving the amount of money proposed to be raised by such levy which amount may be the total estimated amount payable under any contract awarded for construction or improvement, or for any portion thereof, or for any excess of cost over the amount of any past levies already made for the same purpose. The board of directors may use any available moneys of the district, not already allocated to some other purpose, for the payment of any interest or principal due or past due on any revenue bonds of the district, and may advance moneys of the district for such purposes and in the event of such advancement shall be entitled to reimbursement in the amount thereof out of any levies thereafter made or any moneys thereafter collected and applicable to the payment of such bonds.

All revenue bonds issued under this act shall be signed by the treasurer of the district, attested by the secretary of the board of directors thereof and shall have the official seal of the district attached thereto. The interest coupons attached to said bonds shall be in such form as the said treasurer shall determine subject to the provisions of this act and the determination of the board of directors, and the signature on said interest coupons shall be that of said treasurer and may be either written or engraved or printed facsimile. The principal and interest of any revenue bonds issued under the provisions of this act shall be payable in legal tender of the United States of America at the office of the treasurer of the district issuing the same. Said revenue bonds shall be serial in character and an approximately even proportion of the total amount of each issue shall be payable annually; provided, that the amount of the principal due in each annual payment need not be exactly the same but with respect to each installment excepting the last may be made to differ not more than five hundred dollars ($500) from the amount obtained by dividing the total of the principal amount due under the bonds, by the number of installments which shall not exceed four; the last installment shall be for the balance of the total principal amount not provided to be paid in the previous installments.

The revenue bonds shall be issued at such times and manner and in such amounts as may be required to meet the requirements for the payment of demands of the district as may be determined by the board of directors. The bonds so issued shall be sold in such amounts and at such times and in such manner as the board of directors may determine, or they may be delivered to any contractor performing any work or improvement for the district, at par, in satisfaction of any sum due upon any contract therefor.

The State board of control of the State of California is hereby authorized to purchase such bonds and pay for them out of any surplus money in the state treasury which, in its judgment, is not required for governmental purposes prior to the maturity of such bonds. The boards of supervisors of the several counties within the district shall likewise have authority to purchase such bonds with any surplus funds under their control.

All bonds which may be issued under the authority of this act shall be legal investments for all trust funds, and for the funds of insurance companies, banks, both commercial and savings, and trust companies, and for state school funds, and whenever any money or funds may by any law now or hereafter enacted be invested in bonds of cities, cities and counties, counties, school districts or irrigation districts within the State of California, such money or funds may be invested in any bonds issued under this act, and whenever bonds of cities, cities and counties, counties, school districts or irrigation districts within this state may by any law now or hereafter enacted be used as security for the performance of any act or the deposit of any public moneys, any bonds issued under the provisions of this act may be so used.

Sec. 22. Tax levy for payment of revenue bonds. The board of directors of any joint highway district organized under the provisions of this act is hereby empowered and it shall be the duty of such board to levy a tax annually within said district sufficient to meet the principal and interest of all outstanding revenue bonds coming due in each fiscal year.

The treasurer of each district organized or reorganized hereunder shall annually determine the amount of money necessary to be raised for the payment of principal and interest coming due in such year upon any revenue bonds issued hereunder. To such amount shall be added a sum sufficient, in the judgment of said treasurer, to cover anticipated delinquencies and the resulting sum shall be levied upon all of the taxable property in the several counties composing the district according to the percentages and proportions established for each county as provided in section 12 hereof. All taxes of any joint highway district organized under the provisions of this act shall be collected in behalf of such district by the proper county officers in the several counties within said district in the same time, form and manner as is or shall be hereafter provided for the collection of county taxes, and the treasurer of the joint highway district shall, prior to the fifteenth day of August in each year transmit to the board of supervisors of each county within the district a statement of the total sum to be collected within such county in such fiscal year in behalf of the district and it shall thereupon be the duty of the board of supervisors of each county in the district and of the other proper fiscal officers thereof, to cause said amount so certified by the district treasurer to be collected upon and from the taxable property within such county and the total amount of such collections shall be transmitted to and deposited with the district treasurer not later than the first day of each month following the collection of the same. All taxes of any district organized under the provisions of this act shall become due and payable in the same time and manner as county taxes are due and payable and shall become delinquent at the same times and in the same proportionate amounts and bear the same proportionate penalties and interest after delinquency as do county taxes, and all laws applicable to the levy, collection and enforcement of county taxes are hereby made applicable hereto where not in conflict with the provisions of this act.

The board of supervisors of any county within the district, upon receiving the report of the district treasurer showing the amount to be raised within said county for the current year, may pay said amount out of any moneys of said county applicable to the purposes of this act as set forth in section 19 hereof, and not otherwise appropriated. Upon such payment being made, no levy of district taxes need be made for the year covering such payment, within the county paying the same.

Sec. 23. Funding bonds. As a separate and cumulative method of financing, the board of directors of any district organized hereunder may cause bonds to be issued in the manner hereinafter provided, to cover the costs and expenses of the whole or any part of any acquisitions of property and work and improvement done or made under the provisions of this act. In the event that the board of directors propose to issue funding bonds as herein provided, they shall first adopt a resolution setting forth their intention so to do, which resolution shall also contain the following:

1. A general description of the boundaries of the district to be charged with the payment of any funding bonds which are proposed to be issued. Said district may embrace the whole or any portion of any joint highway district organized and existing under the provisions of this act, and said district shall be divided into zones composed of the counties, or portions thereof, composing such district. It shall be a sufficient description of the boundaries of any such funding district and the zones therein, if the same are clearly shown upon a map or plat attached to said resolution.

2. A description in general terms of the location, character and cost of the acquisition of property or construction work, for the expenses of which or any portion thereof it is proposed to issue funding bonds as herein provided.

3. A statement of the amount for which it is proposed to issue funding bonds, together with a statement of the maximum time for which such bonds are proposed to be issued (which shall not exceed five (5) years from the date of the order providing for the issuance of the same), and the rate of interest which such bonds shall bear, not to exceed six per centum (6%) per annum.

4. A statement of the percentage of the total amount of the annual sums which it is proposed to levy against and upon the lands within the several zones in such funding district for the payment and retirement of such funding bonds, together with interest thereon. Such percentages shall not exceed the proportionate amounts chargeable within and against the several counties within the district as such amounts are set forth in the resolution of the board of directors provided for in section 12 hereof. Said resolution shall also fix a time and place of hearing upon the matter of the proposed issuance of funding bonds, as set forth in said resolution.

Sec. 24. Hearing upon funding bonds. Upon the adoption of the resolution provided by section 23 hereof, by the board of directors, the secretary thereof shall cause a notice of the time and place of hearing to be published twice in a newspaper of general circulation published at the county seat of each county embraced within the boundaries of the proposed funding district. The newspapers in which such publication shall be made may be designated by the board of directors or in the absence of such designation by the secretary thereof. The time fixed for such hearing shall not be less than fifteen (15) days after the completion of the publications herein provided for. A copy of the notice of hearing above mentioned shall be transmitted by the secretary of the board of directors to the several boards of supervisors of the counties comprising the joint highway district, not less than thirty (30) days prior to the time fixed for hearing. No county or portion of a county shall be included within any funding district, which has previously paid into the district treasury any amount previously levied within and upon such county.

Upon such hearing or at any time to which the same may be adjourned, any and all persons interested may appear and in writing set forth any objections they may have to the boundaries of the proposed funding district or the zones therein, to the proposed issuance of funding bonds or upon the question of benefits to be derived by any parcel or parcels of land within the proposed funding district, or the amount thereof.

The board of directors shall hear and determine all protests or objections presented at such hearing. Said board shall have power at such hearing to alter the boundaries of the proposed funding district or change the amount for which funding bonds are proposed to be issued, but may not enlarge the boundaries of such district or increase the amount of bonds proposed to be issued. At the conclusion of such hearing, the board of directors shall finally determine the boundaries of such funding district and the zones therein and shall determine the amount of funding bonds to be issued, which amount shall not exceed the benefits to be derived by the lands within said district from the project for which said bonds are to be issued. All decisions, findings and determinations of the board of directors upon notice and hearing as aforesaid, shall be final and conclusive upon all persons entitled to present protests or objections at such hearing, in the absence of actual fraud.

Following such hearing the board of directors, if it determines to issue funding bonds, shall cause its findings in relation thereto to be transmitted to the boards of supervisors of the several counties within the district. If any such board of supervisors makes objection to the issuance of such funding bonds within fifteen (15) days after receiving notice thereof, the board of directors shall have no power to cause the same to be issued, but such board of directors may take new proceedings in the same manner as provided in the first instance covering an amended proposition for the issuance of funding bonds for the same or any different project or any portions thereof. If no objections are made by any board of supervisors as in this section provided, the board of directors may cause funding bonds to be issued as herein provided.

All revenue bonds issued under this act shall be signed by the treasurer of the district, attested by the secretary and shall have the official seal of such district attached thereto. The interest coupons attached to said bonds shall be in such form as the said treasurer shall determine subject to the provisions of this act and the determination of the board of directors, and the signature of said interest coupons shall be that of said treasurer and may be either written or engraved or printed facsimile. The principal and interest of the bonds issued under this act shall be payable in legal tender of the United States of America at the office of the treasurer of the district issuing same. Said funding bonds shall be serial in character and an approximately even proportion of the total amount of each issue shall be payable annually; provided, that the amount of the principal due in each annual payment need not be exactly the same but with respect to each installment excepting the last may be made to differ not more than five hundred dollars ($500) from the amount obtained by dividing the total of the principal amount due under the bonds, by the number of installments; the last installment shall be for the balance of the total principal amount not provided to be paid in the previous installments.

The funding bonds shall be issued at such time and manner and in such amounts as may be required to meet the payment of the demands of the district, as may be determined by the board of directors. The form, denomination, rate of interest, time, place and manner of payment and all matters relating to such issuance shall be determined by the board of directors of the district, in accordance with the provisions of this act; provided, that the rate of interest shall not exceed six per centum per annum.

The funding bonds so issued may be sold in such amounts and at such times and in such manner as the board of directors may determine, or they may be delivered to any contractor performing any work or improvement for the district, at par, in satisfaction of any sum due upon any contract therefor. The state board of control is hereby authorized to purchase such bonds and pay for them out of any surplus money in the state treasury which, in its judgment, is not required for governmental purposes prior to the maturity of such bonds. The boards of supervisors of the several counties shall likewise have authority to purchase such bonds with any surplus funds under their control.

Sec. 26. Payment of funding bonds. The treasurer of the district shall annually transmit to the several boards of supervisors within the district and prior to the fifteenth day of August in each year, a statement showing the amount to be raised in such year by the levy and collection of special assessment taxes upon the lands within such county which are within any funding district and not devoted to any public use, and for the payment of principal, interest and delinquencies upon any funding bonds of the district. The provisions herein contained respecting the issuance of funding bonds shall be cumulative and shall not affect any of the other provisions or sections of this act relative to other bonds or levies. Any number of series of funding bonds may be issued under this section for any portion or portions of a single or different projects in any district organized and existing under the provisions of this act.

Sec. 27. Curative provisions. All bonds issued in pursuance of the provisions of this act shall by their issuance be conclusive evidence of the regularity, validity and legal sufficiency, of all proceedings, acts and determinations in anywise pertaining thereto, had or made under this act, and after the same are issued no assessment tax or tax or other charge levied or collected for the purpose of paying the principal or interest on any bonds issued hereunder shall be held to be invalid or illegal or set aside or refunded, by reason of any error, informality, irregularity, omission or defect in any of the proceedings, acts or determinations in anywise pertaining to the issuance or payment of said bonds, nor shall any action or proceeding be thereafter commenced or maintained to cancel or set aside said bonds or to prevent the payment thereof or the levy or collection or enforcement of any assessment tax, tax or other charge made for such payment.

Sec. 28. Limitation on indebtedness. No bonds shall be issued by any district hereafter organized or reorganized under the provisions of this act in an amount which will aggregate at any time an obligation in excess of ten per centum (10%) of the assessed value of the aggregate total taxable property within the district as shown by the then current taxation assessment rolls of the several counties within the district. The property within any county shall not at any time be obligated for all joint highway district purposes, if in more than one district, in any amount in excess of fifteen per centum (15%) of the assessed value of the aggregate total taxable property within such county as shown by the then current taxation assessment rolls of such county; provided, however, that this section shall have no application to proceedings under section 30 hereof.

Sec. 29. Construction fund. All moneys of the district applicable to the payment of construction costs shall be placed in a fund of the district to be designated "Construction fund," the moneys in which shall be disbursed by the treasurer of the district as ordered by the board of directors. Such fund may be used to pay all construction costs authorized under the provisions of this act, all necessary engineering, legal and other operating costs of the district, including salaries of officers, agents and employees, and also for the payment of the cost of the purchase and acquisition of all necessary property and rights of way required for any project authorized under the provisions of this act.

Sec. 30. Bonds to correct invalidity. Whenever any court of competent jurisdiction shall determine that any contract purporting to have been made, or any proceedings, steps or actions purporting to have been taken, levy made, or any bond or bonds issued under this act, is or are void, invalid or for any reason unenforceable, or if such court shall for any cause enjoin the issuance or payment of any bonds issued or proposed to be issued under the provisions of this act, said court shall also determine whether any work or improvement has been done or performed or services rendered by any person in behalf of and to the benefit of the district under any invalid contract or proceeding or under any contract pursuant to which bonds were issued or proposed to be issued, and if so what part, if any, is of a kind that is lawful under the provisions of this act. If the court shall find that any such work or improvement has been done or made, or services rendered, or acquisitions of necessary rights of way or property, then the court shall order the board of directors of the district to take proceedings as in this section provided for the issuance of bonds to cover the costs of the same. The board of directors of the district may also utilize the provisions of this section without order of court wherever necessary to correct any invalid acts or proceedings coming within the scope of this section.

It is hereby declared to be the true intent and meaning of this section to make the costs and expenses of all work or improvements made or to be made, or services rendered, and all necessary acquisitions or property or rights of way, had, done or performed under an attempted compliance with and exercise of the powers and rights conferred by the provisions of this act, payable by the property benefited or to be benefited thereby, by the issuance of bonds as in this section provided, to defray the costs and expenses thereof.

Upon a decree of court or upon its own order as herein provided, it shall be the mandatory duty of the board of directors of the district to cause bonds to be issued as in this section provided. The board of directors shall cause a report on the bond issue proposed under this section to be made and filed by the district engineer or other competent person appointed by said board for such purpose. Said report shall set forth in general terms what the proposed bond issue is to cover, together with the total amount of the same. Such total amount shall not exceed the original charge made against the district for the items included, plus a reasonable interest thereon not to exceed six (6) per centum per annum. Said report shall also contain a description of the lands benefited by the items for which the bonds hereunder are proposed to be issued, a description of the zones, if any, into which such district is to be divided, and the amounts proposed to be made chargeable against and upon each of such zones, which amounts shall not exceed the percentages of the total sum established for the several counties within the joint highway district under section 12 hereof, also a description of the bonds to be issued for the total amount set forth in said report. The bonds provided for in this section shall in terms and form conform substantially to the provision contained in this act relative to funding bonds and shall be payable in not more than five annual installments. The annual amounts required for the payment of principal and interest on any bonds issued under the provisions of this section, shall be levied and collected in the same manner as is in this act provided with relation to funding bonds.

The report above referred to shall be filed with the secretary of the board of directors, and upon such filing said secretary shall fix a time and place of hearing thereon and give notice thereof. Notice of such hearing shall be published at least twice in one or more newspapers of general circulation to be selected and designated by such secretary, and which shall be published and circulated within the boundaries of the district set forth and described in the report above referred to. The last publication of such notice of hearing shall be not less than twenty days prior to the date set for such hearing.

At the time fixed for the hearing upon said report, or at any time to which said hearing may be adjourned or continued, any person interested may appear and be heard upon any of the matters set forth in said report. The board of directors shall have power to confirm said report and to revise, correct or modify the same, in such manner as said board may deem just and in accordance with the facts as said board may find them. At the conclusion of the hearing said board shall adopt a resolution declaring its findings and determinations upon said report, and the same shall be final and conclusive upon all persons and in all proceedings or actions as to all matters so found and determined. If no changes are made in the said report, it shall be sufficient for said board to declare that said report is confirmed and the same shall thereupon become the findings and determinations of the board. Upon the adoption of the resolution of the board of directors above provided for, the treasurer of the district shall immediately cause bonds to be issued under the provisions of this section in the amount and manner provided in said resolution. Said bonds shall be dated as of the date of said resolution. Said bonds shall by their issuance be conclusive evidence of the regularity of all proceedings prior thereto under this act and after the same are issued, no tax, assessment tax, or other charge or levy, levied or collected for the purpose of paying the principal or interest on said bonds shall be held to be illegal, invalid or set aside or refunded by reason of any error, informality, irregularity, omission of defect in any of the proceedings prior to the issuance of said bonds, nor shall any action or proceeding be commenced or maintained after sixty (60) days from and after the date of their issuance to cancel or set aside said bonds or prevent the payment thereof, or the levy, collection or enforcement of any taxes, assessment taxes or other charges or levies for such payment. Said bonds shall be issued and delivered to the person or persons entitled thereto.

Sec. 31. Control of highways under construction by district. During the course of the construction or improvement of any highway or project by any district under the provisions of this act the said highway or project shall be under the control of the board of directors of the district and such board of directors shall have the right to make all necessary regulations concerning the use of any highway under the control of the district which are not in conflict with general laws and may exclude from such highway such vehicular or other traffic as may, in the opinion of the board of directors, be detrimental to the public safety or will result in injury to the roadway during the progress of construction or improvements thereon, or otherwise. All laws relating to the use of state highways in this state shall be applicable to any highways under the control of any district organized hereunder.

Sec. 32. Highways on completion to revert to counties. Upon the completion of construction or improvement of any highway or portion thereof by any district organized hereunder, the board of directors of the district shall adopt a resolution declaring such completion and transmit a copy of the same to the board of supervisors of the county in which such highway or portion of highway is situated. Upon receipt of such resolution by such board of supervisors, the control of such highway or portion thereof shall revert to the county in which the same is situated and become a part of the county system of highways therein and such county shall be liable for the future maintenance and care thereof.

Sec. 33. Condemnation of rights of way by counties in behalf of district. The board of directors of any district organized hereunder may request the proper officers of any county situated within the district to condemn and acquire property or rights of way within such county necessary for the project or projects for which the district is created. When so requested, it shall be the duty of the board of supervisors of the county so requested to undertake the condemnation and acquisition requested by the board of directors of the district and the cost thereof shall be a proper deduction from any levy made by the district upon or within such county. Any excess in such cost over and above the amount of any such levy shall be paid to the county by the district out of its proper funds provided for that purpose. The proceedings required to be taken by any county or county officers under the provisions of this section shall include the taking of immediate possession of any property or rights of way necessary for district purposes.

Sec. 34. Control of state moneys. In case it shall be determined that any sum of money authorized to be expended from the state treasury of the State of California shall be expended as required by section 22 of article IV of the constitution of the State of California, then the advisory board of the state engineering department, or corresponding body or person in the department of public works, shall have the exclusive management and control of such expenditure. If the boards of supervisors of the several counties concerned assent to the relinquishment and transfer of such management and control, but such advisory board or other officer may in its or his discretion delegate its or his powers to the board of directors of the joint highway district and said joint highway district is hereby declared to be a state institution within the meaning of said constitution. The board of directors of the district may vest in the state engineering department or the department of public works, authority to supervise the work of construction, or so much thereof as it may, in its discretion, determine.

Sec. 35. Cooperation with federal government. In case the governmental authorities of the United States should desire to include any highway or project constructed or to be constructed under the provisions of this act in any scheme of national defense and use or assume the use of the same for military or other purposes, the board of directors of the district, either directly or through the proper board or officers of the State of California, may enter into negotiations respecting the same and may enter into and consummate such contracts or agreement in relation thereto as may be mutually satisfactory.

Sec. 36. Dissolution of districts. Upon the completion of any project or projects for which any district is organized under the provisions of this act and upon the payment and retirement of all outstanding bonds and obligations of any district, the same shall be dissolved by resolution of the board of directors thereof. A copy of the resolution of dissolution shall be transmitted to the secretary of state and to the boards of supervisors of the several counties composing the district. Any property or moneys belonging to such district at the time of dissolution shall by the board of directors thereof be distributed to the several counties composing the district in the proportions in which such counties have contributed to the expense and operation of such district.

Sec. 37. Repeal of conflicting provisions. All acts and parts of acts in conflict herewith are hereby repealed except that all joint highway districts organized or existing prior to the effective date of this act may continue their operations and the discharge of their obligations pursuant to the provisions of all laws appertaining to such districts in effect prior to the effective date of this act.

Sec. 38. Reorganization of existing districts under this act. All joint highway districts heretofore organized and existing or tentatively organized prior to the effective date of this act, may reorganize under the provisions of this act in the manner following: The board of directors of the district or tentative district proposing to reorganize under the provisions of this act may adopt a resolution declaring their intention so to do and transmit the same to the boards of supervisors of the several counties composing the district for approval. Any land which may have escaped the payment of any assessment, whether because of the omission of the land from the assessment book or because of illegality in the levying thereof or any proceedings relating thereto, shall, in addition to its assessment for the then current year, be entered in the assessment book by the assessor at the valuation which he may deem proper for the year of the escaped assessment. Such additional assessment shall be subject to equalization as is provided in this act for the current assessment, and at the time of levying the assessment for the current year the board of directors of the district shall levy on said land an assessment at the rate fixed in the year of the escaped assessment, or, if no rate was legally fixed in that year, the board shall levy an assessment on said land at the rate which should have been computed in that year to raise the amount of money then required by the district. Any such additional assessment shall be payable at the same time or times as the current assessment, and if not paid, shall be subject to like penalties and proceedings to enforce its collection.

SEC. 3. A new section is hereby added to said act, to be numbered 35c to read as follows:

Sec. 35c. Anyone having an interest in any land within the district may file with the secretary of the board of directors a verified petition, alleging that said land, or some described portion thereof, was, when it became a part of the district, irrigated from another system of works than the works of or proposed for the district and has continued ever since to be exclusively so irrigated and is entitled to a special rate of assessment, and praying the board to determine what proportion or part of the regular rates of assessment in the district should be used in levying assessments on the land described in the petition. The board shall set a time and place for the hearing of said petition, or of all of the petitions so filed if more than one has been filed, and shall cause notice thereof to be given in a newspaper published in the county wherein the office of the district is located. The notice shall state that a petition has been, or petitions have been presented to the board praying for a determination that certain lands described therein, but which need not be described in the notice, are entitled to a special rate or rates of assessment and giving the names of the petitioner, or petitioners, and the time and place set for the hearing. The board shall meet at the time and place so set and proceed in such order as it may deem proper, to hear the petition or petitions and shall hear all competent and relevant evidence offered in support of any petition or in opposition thereto, and may adjourn the hearing from time to time. A fee of ten dollars must be paid to the secretary before the filing of any such petition, and the money shall be applied to the cost of the publication of the notice and other expenses of the hearing. If there shall be any balance after the conclusion of the hearing, it shall be returned to the petitioner or divided among the petitioners contributing thereto in proportion to the respective areas described in their petitions. After the conclusion of the hearing, if the board shall find that any of the land described in any petition or petitions has been irrigated as alleged and is not and will not be so benefited by the operations of the district as to justify its assessment at the same rate as other lands in the district not so irrigated, which rate may be referred to as the regular rate of assessment, the board shall, in an order or resolution which shall be entered in full upon its minutes, describe the land entitled to a special rate of assessment, or the respective parcels thereof if separate parcels are to be assessed, and shall determine and fix the proportion or part of the regular rate of assessment which shall be applied in levying assessments on said land, or on each parcel thereof if various parcels are found to be entitled to different special rates, in order that the assessments to be levied on said land may be in accordance with the benefits which it receives or will receive from the operations of the district. If the board shall determine that any land is entitled to a special rate of assessment, a certified copy of the order or resolution so determining shall be delivered to the assessor, and thereafter, until notified of a change in such determination, he shall enter the land described therein separately in the assessment book and so designate it that it may readily be distinguished from other land not entitled to a special rate. If such a determination is made in any year too late for the land to be separately described in the assessment book, but before the annual assessment has been levied, the board shall direct the secretary to make such entries in the assessment book as will enable him to compute the assessments at the special rate or rates determined by the board. If the board shall have determined that any land is entitled to a special rate of assessment, the rates of assessment in the district shall be so computed as to be sufficient to produce the sum to be raised after deducting fifteen per cent from the assessed valuation as provided in section 60 of this act. The determination of the board with respect to any land after a hearing as aforesaid shall not be changed unless the board, on petition of a party affected, shall consent to another hearing, or on its own motion shall cause notice to be served on the owner of the land to show cause why the determination should not be changed, in either of which cases another hearing shall be advertised and held as hereinabove provided.

the approval of the California bond certification commission so provide by resolution adopted at or prior to the time of the issuance of such bonds. In case the board of directors shall determine that the principal of any funding or refunding bonds issued pursuant to this act, or any part of such principal, shall be payable only from the proceeds of any such contract or contracts or other source or sources, other than assessments, it shall cause a brief statement of such limitations upon the payment of said principal, or portion thereof, to be set forth in such bonds; and in case such limitations shall affect the payment of the interest of such bonds or any part thereof, a statement of such limitations shall be set forth in the interest coupons representing such interest and also in the bonds to which such interest coupons are appurtenant. SEC. 32c. Notwithstanding anything to the contrary in this act contained, the proceeds of any existing or proposed contract or contracts, or source or sources of payment, or any portion thereof, designated by said board, may by resolution of said board be allocated to the payment of the principal and or interest of any bonds of the district, including funding or refunding bonds, or of any portion of such principal or interest designated by said board. Any such allocation shall be irrevocable until all of such bonds and their appurtenant coupons shall have been paid or retired. In the event that the board of directors, with the approval of the California bond certification commission, shall, pursuant to this act, provide that the principal and/or interest of any bonds, or any portion of such principal and or interest, shall be payable solely from the proceeds of any such contract or contracts, or other source or sources of payment, other than assessments, neither the district nor any officer thereof shall be helden for such payment otherwise.

The district may also, with the approval of said commission, designate any bank or trust company or banks or trust companies to act as its agent or agents for the purpose of making payment of the principal and or interest of any of its bonds, including its funding or refunding bonds, and or receiving the payments under any contract or contracts for the sale of water or electricity or any revenues from any other source or sources, so allocated by said board to the payment of the principal and/or interest, or any part thereof, of any such bonds, or for the purpose of applying such payments to the payment of such principal or interest, or portion thereof, so designated; and the district, with the consent of said commission, may from time to time substitute another bank or trust company or other banks or trust companies in the place of the bank or trust company or banks or trust companies so designated, and similarly, may substitute another bank or trust company or other banks or trust companies in the place of any bank or trust company or banks or trust companies substituted as aforesaid.

The Legislature hereby declares that it would have passed this act and each section, subsection, sentence, clause and phrase hereof irrespective of the fact that any one or more of the sections, subsections, sentences, clauses or phrases be declared unconstitutional or unenforceable.

SEC. 4. This act shall not invalidate any act done, or any section or proceeding had or commenced before this act takes effect. All proceedings commenced prior to the effective date hereof shall be completed in accordance with the provisions of this act and all acts and proceedings commenced before but not completed until after the effective date of this act, whether relating to the authorization, issuance, exchange, sale or delivery of funding or refunding bonds, or otherwise, shall be valid and legally binding if taken in accordance with the provisions of this act.

SEC. 5. This act shall take effect immediately.

SEC. 6. This act is hereby declared to be an urgency measure within the meaning of section 1 of article IV of the constitution of the State of California and it is deemed necessary for the immediate preservation of the public peace, health and safety that this law shall go into immediate effect. The following is a statement of the facts constituting such urgency:

Many irrigation districts organized under the laws of this state have issued bonds for the purpose of acquiring works for the distribution of water to the lands within such districts for irrigation and domestic use which bonds mature in whole or in part on July 1, 1931. If this amendment does not go into effect until ninety days after the final adjournment of this session of the Legislature, such districts will be unable to take advantage of the provisions hereof prior to July 1, 1931. Unless such bonds and interest coupons are refunded pursuant to the provisions of this amendment such districts must advance large cash payments for maturing bonds and interest coupons on that date, thereby leaving them without sufficient funds to enable them to operate properly and efficiently their distribution works. The proper and efficient operation of such works is necessary for the purpose of furnishing water for irrigation and domestic use to the landowners within such districts and also to certain municipalities which are dependent entirely upon such districts for their source of water supply. The failure of the water supply of any such district or the inability of such district to make proper distribution thereof would be a menace to the public health of the inhabitants of such districts and of the municipalities aforesaid. If, however, the provisions of this amendment become a law immediately, such districts will be able to refund their bonds and coupons on or before July 1, 1931, thereby enabling such districts to utilize all available funds for the proper operation of their works for supplying and distributing water."

Bill ordered to print, and re-referred to Committee on Irrigation.

This statute shall not be construed so as to relieve such father from the criminal liability defined herein for such omission merely because the mother of such child is legally entitled to the custody of such child nor because the mother of such child, or any other person, or organization, voluntarily or involuntarily furnishes such necessary food, clothing, shelter or medical attendance or other remedial care for such child, or undertakes to do so.

Proof of abandonment or desertion of a child by such father, or the omission by such father to furnish necessary food, clothing, shelter or medical attendance or other remedial care for his child is prima facie evidence that such abandonment or desertion or omission to furnish necessary food, clothing, shelter or medical attendance or other remedial care is wilful and without lawful excuse.

In the event that the father of either a legitimate or illegitimate minor child is dead or unable by reason of physical or mental infirmity to furnish the necessary food, clothing, shelter or medical attendance or other remedial care for his minor child, the mother of said child shall become subject to the provisions of this section and be criminally liable for the support of said minor child during the period of inability on the part of the father to the same extent and in the same manner as the father would have been had it not been for his physical or mental infirmity.

The provisions of this section are applicable whether the parents of such child are married or divorced, and regardless of any decree made in any divorce action relative to alimony or to the support of the child. A child conceived but not yet born is to be deemed an existing person in so far as this section is concerned."

On certificates hereafter issued containing such provision, no withdrawals shall be permitted of amounts less than those prescribed in such respective certificates. The provisions of this section, however, shall not be applicable to associations issuing neither stock nor investment certificates".

On page 32, line 42, of the printed bill, as amended March 3, 1931, after the new section 6.07 (which has been added as the result of amendment number 56 above) insert the following new section:

"Sec. 6.08. Withdrawals from associations not issuing stock or investment certificates. The provisions of this section shall not be applicable to any association issuing stock or investment certificates, but shall be applicable to any association not issuing either stock or investment certificates in the event, but only in the event, its by-laws expressly provide that this section shall be applicable to such association. In such case, the provisions of the preceding sections of this article shall also be applicable to such associations, but only if and to the extent that they are not inconsistent with the provisions of this section. In all such associations, holders of free shares therein desiring to withdraw in whole or in part may do so by giving notice thereof in writing of the amount desired to be withdrawn. At all times the right of shareholders to receive payment of withdrawals shall be secondary and subsequent to the right of such association to pay and to provide reasonable reserves for the payment of the following: dividends on shares, taxes, assessments, insurance, amounts necessary to fulfill previous loan commitments, and other sums necessary to protect and preserve its properties and its interests in properties (including those on the security of which it holds loans); principal and interest on borrowings by such association; rent, compensation of officers, agents, salesmen and other employees, and other usual and ordinary operating expenses of such association.

While such association is on notice and subject to the foregoing provisions, not more than one-half of the net monthly receipts from assets then owned, in any one month, shall be applied to withdrawals for that month without the consent of the board of directors, and such payment shall continue until the value of all shares with respect to which notices of withdrawal are on file has been reduced to an amount less than three per cent of the value of all outstanding shares. No shareholders shall be permitted to withdraw whose shares are pledged to the association as security for a loan until such loan is fully paid. Whenever the demands of withdrawing shareholders exceed the money applicable to their payment, the notices of intention to withdraw must be registered in the order of filing and while such association is on notice payments thereon must be made in succession in the order that such notices were filed and registered. The remaining one-half of net receipts of such association may be used, in the discretion of the board of directors, for payment of withdrawals not noticed, subject to such limitations as the board of directors may fix, and for the operating expenses of the business and for making loans to members, or applied, in the discretion of the board of directors, to payment of withdrawals on notice. Such association shall at no time be on a pro rata basis, except as herein-after provided.

All new investments by shareholders after such association is on notice, whether made upon shares already issued or upon new shares issued, shall have priority and shall have a prior right of withdrawal as against all other shareholders.

Whenever an application for withdrawal of free shares shall have been on file, or the payment of matured shares demanded, and either shall have remained unpaid for a period of one year, all the receipts of such association from dues, interest, premium, loans repaid, and the proceeds of all other investments, shall, after the payment of expenses and general indebtedness, be applied toward the payment of withdrawals and maturities; and the board of directors or the commissioner may direct that such payments shall be made upon a ratable and proportionate basis. Whenever such application or demands, whether heretofore or hereafter made, have been on file and remain unpaid in whole or in part for more than two years the commissioner may in his discretion forthwith take possession of the property and business of such association, and retain such possession until its affairs be finally liquidated in the manner provided by law for the liquidation of associations by him, or until such association may be allowed to resume business upon such conditions as may be approved by the commissioner."

"Sec. 7.06. Assessments to restore impaired capital. Whenever it shall appear from the report of any association, or the commissioner shall have reason to believe, that the value of the assets of any association after first deducting therefrom the amount of liabilities of such association, including its outstanding investment certificates and shares at the value thereof, is less than the aggregate par value of its outstanding stock, or, in the case of an association issuing both stock and investment certificates, is less than the investment certificate reserve required for such association pursuant to section 5.03 of this act, it shall be the duty of the commissioner and he shall have the power to examine such association and ascertain the facts, and in case he finds that such deficiency exists he shall require such association to make good such deficiency within sixty days after the date of such requisition. The directors of every such association upon which such request shall have been made, shall levy an assessment upon the stock thereof to repair such deficiency, and shall cause notice of such request to be given to each stockholder of such association and of the amount of the assessment which he must pay for the purpose of making good such deficiency. If any stockholder shall refuse or neglect to pay the assessment specified in such notice within thirty days from the date of mailing or serving such notice, the directors of such association shall have the right to sell to the highest bidder at public auction the stock of such stockholder, after giving a previous notice of such sale for ten days in a newspaper of general circulation published in the county where the principal office in this state of such association is located, and a copy of such notice of sale shall also be served on such stockholder by being served personally on him or by mailing to his last known address ten days before the day fixed for such sale, or such stock may be sold at a private sale and without such public notice; provided, however, that before making such private sale thereof an offer in writing shall first be obtained and a copy thereof served upon the owner of record of the stock to be sold, either personally or by mailing a copy of such offer to his last known address, and if, after service of such offer, such owner shall still refuse or neglect to pay such assessment within two weeks from the time of the service of such offer, the said directors may accept such offer and sell such stock to the person making such offer, or to any other person or persons making a larger offer than the amount named in the offer submitted to the stockholder; but such stock shall in no event be sold for a smaller sum than the valuation put on it by the commissioner in his determination and requisition as to such assessment, nor for less than the amount of such assessment so called for and the expense of sale. Out of the avails of the stock so sold, the directors shall pay the amount of assessment levied thereon, and the necessary cost of sale, and the balance, if any, shall be paid to the person or persons whose stock has thus been sold. A sale of stock as herein provided shall effect an absolute cancellation of the outstanding certificate or certificates evidencing the stock so sold, and shall make the same null and void and a new certificate shall be issued by the association to purchaser thereof."

Article XV. Borrowers' Mutual Building and Loan Associations.

Sec. 1501. Borrowers' mutual building and loan associations defined. The term "borrowers' mutual building and loan association" is hereby defined to mean any incorporated corporation which shall have been incorporated to conduct or shall be engaged in conducting the business of borrowing, receiving and lending money in accordance with the provisions of this article only, and which shall have no non-revocable capital, and which shall make loans on the mutual plan only, and which shall issue no investment certificates, and shall not conduct or maintain any business, and, in case of each such association heretofore incorporated, shall have its principal office in a city or town of not more than ten thousand population.

Sec. 1502. This article is an exception to the other provisions of this act. Nothing contained in this act shall in any manner affect, control, or apply to any borrowers' mutual building and loan association, except the following sections in this article and such other portions of this act as are expressly made applicable thereto.

by the following sections of this article. The following sections of this article shall not affect, control or apply to any building and loan associations except borrowers' mutual building and loan associations.

Sec. 15.03. Powers—purposes for which formed. Borrowers' mutual building and loan associations shall have power to receive money and accumulate funds to be loaned, and to loan the same to their shareholders, to permit shareholders and investors to withdraw part or all of their payments or investments, and to prescribe the terms and conditions of such withdrawal; to cancel shares, the payments on which have been withdrawn; to borrow money for the purpose of making loans and of paying withdrawals and maturities; and shall have such further powers as may be specifically set forth under this article; provided, however, that no such association shall, at any time, have or carry upon its books, for any member or investor, any demand, commercial or checking account or any credit to be withdrawn upon the presentation of any negotiable check or draft.

Every such corporation hereafter formed, setting forth the purposes for which it is formed, shall state, in its articles of incorporation, that it is formed to encourage industry, frugality, home building and savings among its shareholders and members; the accumulation of savings; the loaning to its shareholders and members of the moneys or funds so accumulated, with the profits and earnings thereon, and the repayment to each of his savings and profits, whenever they have accumulated to the full par value of the shares, or at any time when he shall desire the same or when the corporation shall desire to repay the same, as it may be provided in the by-laws; and shall also state that it is formed for all purposes specified in this article, and nothing in the statutes of this state, to the contrary notwithstanding, shall preclude any such association in any of its advertising from setting forth any of the foregoing purposes.

Sec. 15.04. Capital, how accumulated, classes of shares. The capital of every such corporation shall be divided into shares of the matured or par value of one hundred or two hundred dollars each, as provided by the articles of incorporation, and shall be paid in by the subscribers in the manner provided by the by-laws. All such payments shall be called dues. Certificates shall be issued to each shareholder on the first payment of dues by him. Shares pledged as security for the payment of a loan shall be called pledged shares, and all others free shares. All shares matured and surrendered or canceled, shall become the property of the corporation and may be reissued. The capital shall consist of the accumulated dues, together with the apportioned profits of the corporation, and shall be accumulated by the issuance of "installment shares," "prepaid shares" or "full paid shares," as defined in section 3.02 of this act.

Sec. 15.05. Entrance and transfer fees. Every borrowers' mutual building and loan association shall also have power, by its by-laws, to charge and collect an entrance fee for each share it may issue, not exceeding ten cents on each share, and also to charge and collect a transfer fee, not exceeding ten cents on each share, all of which fees shall be accounted for by the corporation like other funds of the association. No other fee, charge or deduction shall ever be made, or permitted to be made against any shareholder, or against any of his shares, hereafter issued, or the dues paid in thereon for the purpose of creating a fund to be issued in the payment of current or running expenses.

Sec. 15.06. Retiring free shares. The directors may in their discretion, under the regulations prescribed by the by-laws, retire any free shares by enforcing the withdrawal thereof, but whenever the withdrawal of any shares is to be enforced, the holders thereof must be paid the amount actually paid in, and the full amount of earnings at the date of retirement; provided, the installment shares shall not be forced out until after they shall have become four years old.

Sec. 15.07. Maturity of shares and payment. When any share shall have reached its matured value, payment of dues thereon shall cease. Borrowing shareholders whose loans are fully paid shall have their securities released and returned to them. Holders of free shares shall be paid the matured value thereof out of the funds of the corporation with interest at such rate as the by-laws shall provide, from the time the board of directors shall declare such shares to have been matured, until paid; but at no time shall more than one-half of the receipts of the corporation be applicable to the payment of matured shares without the consent of said board. The order of the payment of matured shares, if not otherwise determined by the by-laws, shall be in the numerical order of issuance.

Sec. 15.08. Officers and directors may not borrow. Loans shall be made upon the mutual plan only, accompanied by a pledge of shares having a matured or par value equal to the face of the loan. It shall be unlawful for any director or officer of any corporation governed by this article directly or indirectly, for himself, or as a partner or agent for others, to borrow any of the funds of such corporation, and any officer or director violating the provisions of this section shall be guilty of a felony. Any officer or director of any such corporation who consents on behalf of such corporation to make a loan to any officer or director of such corporation shall be guilty of felony and shall also be personally liable to the corporation for the full amount thereof. Any officer, or director or employee of such corporation who asks or receives or consents or agrees to receive any commission, emolument, gratuity or reward, or any money, property or thing of value, for his own personal benefit or of personal advantage, for procuring or endeavoring to procure for any person, firm or corporation any loan from such corporation, is guilty of a felony. It shall be unlawful for any borrower's mutual building and loan association, corporation or society, organized under the provisions of this article, to loan any of its funds upon the security of, or to invest any of its funds in mining shares or mining stocks, or in the stocks or bonds of any corporation, other than in this article provided; and any officer or director who, on behalf of any such corporation, shall make any such loan or investment, or who shall consent thereto, shall be personally liable to the corporation for the whole amount of any such loan or investment, and shall also be guilty of a felony.

Sec. 15.09. Security for loans, interest rate to appear. For every loan made a note or obligation, expressing and setting forth the exact rate of interest, must be executed by the borrower secured by a first mortgage or deed of trust upon real estate having an appraised value of not less than twenty-five per cent in excess of the face of the loan, or in lieu of a mortgage or deed of trust, loans to the extent of not exceeding ninety per cent of the then withdrawable value, may be made upon the pledge of free shares as security for their repayment. The board of directors may from time to time fix the rate of interest to be charged on loans. A borrower may at any time repay his loan together with interest or arrears due thereon and upon the surrender of the shares pledged as security therefor.

Sec. 15.10. Arrears in payment; default, forfeitures. Whenever any non-borrowing member shall be six months in arrears in the payment of his dues upon free shares, the secretary may give him notice thereof in writing, and a statement of his arrearages, by mailing the same to him at his last post-office address given by him to the association; and if he shall not pay all arrearages within two months thereafter, the board of directors may, at their option, declare his shares forfeited, and at the time of such forfeiture, the withdrawal value thereof shall be determined and stated, and the defaulting member shall be entitled to withdraw the same without interest, upon such notice as shall be required of a withdrawing shareholder. Whenever a borrower shall be three months in arrears in the payment of his dues or interest, the whole loan shall become due at the option of the board of directors, and they may proceed to enforce collection upon the securities held by the association. Upon or after exercising such option, the withdrawal value of all shares pledged as collateral security shall be applied to the payment of the loan, and said shares from the time of such application shall be deemed surrendered to the association and canceled.

Sec. 15.11. May purchase real estate on foreclosure sale. Any such association may purchase at any sale, public or private, any real estate upon which it may have a mortgage, judgment, lien, or other encumbrance, or in which it may have an interest, and may sell, lease or mortgage the same, at pleasure, to any person or persons.

Sec. 15.12. Apportionment of profits; and reserve. Profits and losses shall be apportioned at least annually, and shall be apportioned to all shares in each class at the time of such apportionment, according to the actual or book value thereof. If the reserve fund shall not equal five per cent of the outstanding loans at the time of each apportionment of profits, the directors shall set aside, as a reserve fund, not less than five per cent of the net profits accruing since the last prior apportionment, and shall continue so to do until said fund shall amount to at least five per cent of the loans in force, at which figure said fund shall thereafter be maintained. Said reserve fund shall at all times be available to meet losses arising from any source.

Sec. 15.13. Withdrawals; conditions and limitations. A shareholder desiring to withdraw from any such corporation or to surrender a part or all of his shares, may do so by giving thirty days' notice, in writing, of his intention or desire so to do. On the expiration of such notice he is entitled to receive the full amount paid in upon the shares surrendered, exclusive of the entrance fee, together with such proportion of the earnings thereon as the by-laws may provide, or as may be fixed by the board of directors; but not more than one-half of the monthly receipts in any one month must be applied to withdrawals for that month, without the consent of the board of directors, and no shareholder shall be permitted to withdraw whose stock is pledged to the corporation as security for a loan, until such loan is fully paid. All withdrawals must be paid in succession in the order that the notices of intention are given. Whenever the demands of withdrawing shareholders exceed the money applicable to their payments, the notices of intention to withdraw must be registered in the order of filing and payments thereon must be made in succession, in the order that such notices were filed and registered.

Sec. 15.14. Demands unpaid for two years, business may be taken over. Whenever such applications or demands, whether heretofore or hereafter made, have been on file and remain unpaid in whole or in part for more than two years, the building and loan commissioner may in his discretion forthwith take possession of the property and business of such association, and retain such possession until its affairs be finally liquidated in the manner provided by article XIII of this act.

Sec. 15.15. Who may become members. Any person of full age and sound mind may become a member of a borrowers' mutual building and loan association by taking one or more shares therein and subscribing to the by-laws, and annexing to his signature his post-office address. A minor may hold shares in the name of a parent, guardian, or next friend, as trustee. The shares in any such corporation held by any person, to the extent of one thousand dollars, shall be exempt from execution.

Sec. 15.16. State supervision and control. Borrowers' mutual building and loan associations as in this article defined, doing business in this state, shall be under the supervision and control of the building and loan commissioner and each section of article XIII of this act is hereby incorporated into and made part of this article for the purpose of examination, reports on, regulation, control and liquidation of borrowers' mutual building and loan associations.

Any borrowers' mutual building and loan association may invest in or loan upon bonds of the United States, of the State of California, or of any county, municipality or school district of said state, or of any public utility corporation, or notes or bonds secured by mortgage or deed of trust, payment of which is guaranteed by a policy of mortgage insurance, or mortgage participation certificates, issued by a mortgage insurance company, in accordance with the provisions of chapter 8 of article II of part IV of division I of the Civil Code, and may also invest in bonds or securities certified by the superintendent of banks to be legal as investments for savings banks in accordance with the provisions of an act entitled "An act to define and regulate the business of banking", approved March 1, 1909, and acts amendatory thereof and supplemental thereto."

CONSIDERATION OF DAILY FILE.

THIRD READING OF SENATE BILLS.

Senate Bill No. 317—An act to amend section 21 of chapter 228, Statutes of 1923, entitled "An act to provide for the incorporation and organization and management of bridge and highway districts and to provide for the acquisition and construction by said districts of bridges and approaches thereto, and for the acquisition of all property necessary therefor, and also to provide for the issuance and payment of bonds by said districts, for the levying of taxes and the collection of tolls by said districts and for the annexation of additional territory thereto," relating to funds.

URGENCY CLAUSE.

SEC. 2. This act is hereby declared to be an urgency measure within the meaning of section 1 of article IV of the constitution of the State of California, and it is deemed necessary for the immediate preservation of the public peace, health and safety that this law shall go into immediate effect. The following is a statement of the facts constituting such urgency: The population of this state and the traffic on the highways thereof are very rapidly increasing and in all probability will in the future continue to so increase. The facilities for transportation in this State are inadequate for the needs of the population thereof and such increased traffic, and it is essential that such facilities be immediately increased and improved by the construction of bridges and other works by bridge and highway districts; and unless such bridges and other works are constructed in the near future the public health and safety will be endangered due to congestion of traffic on existing roads and highways in said State. Moreover, there are at the present time a large number of persons in the State of California who are unemployed and who are without means of livelihood. The construction of bridges and other works by bridge and highway districts of this state will furnish work for a large number of such persons and prevent them from becoming public charges. If the provisions of this act become a law immediately, the sale by such bridge and highway districts of their securities will be furthered and they will thereby be enabled to obtain without delay the necessary funds for the construction of such bridges and works and for the employment of a large number of persons hereinabove mentioned who are now without employment, and said districts will also be materially aided in securing bids from contractors and others for the construction of such bridges and works and for the supplying of materials therefor.
